FRESHMEN WIN RUSH AT TUFTS

In a desperate struggle, in which students pummelled one another and even fell from trees while locked in fierce clinches, the Tufts College freshmen whipped the sophomores in the annual "rush" to-day.

Jackson College girls braved the driving rain, came out on the campus and cheered the combatants, careless of drenched clothing or wind-blown tresses.

At the height of the struggle around one of the campus trees from which a freshman flag was flying a sophomore and a freshman, grappling in the branches twenty-five feet above ground, lost foothold and came head-first toward the ground together. Luckily for them, they fell upon a struggling mass of their college mates and escaped with bruises instead of broken bones.

The annual "rush" between Tufts Freshmen and Sophomores is one of the toughest class struggles of the college year. The freshmen had four red and black flags flying from two large elm trees, one near the chapel and one over toward Professors' Row. The numerals "1915" on the flags showed which class put the flags up. It was for the Sophomores to get the flags down.

Rain fell in torrents. The Sophomores piled out on the campus at 7 o'clock. The freshmen were waiting, clustered around the flag trees and even perched in the branches.

Freshmen Hold Ground.

The fight was on in a second. The Sophs "rushed" the Freshmen again and again, but the Freshmen held their ground. The Sophs brought two ladders. The ladders were broken. Repeated assaults were made on the Freshman formation. Clothing was torn to shreds. Combatants rolled in the mud and, after the first five minutes of fighting, all the collegians looked more like cave men than modern lads. The girls cheered frantically and thought it was "just lovely."

Sophomores tried to heap themselves into pyramids and boost one of their number into the flag-flying trees. Freshmen in the branches hurled them down. It was in one of these efforts that one pugnacious Sophomore managed to get a foothold in the tree branches, where he was tackled by a Freshman, and both came down together.

Girls Are Thrilled.

The girls cheered louder than ever. The "rush" was "perfectly thrilling."

Members of the faculty watched the "scrap," with hopes that no one would be killed. Medford residents in the college neighborhood gazed out from breakfast rooms and said: "There's nothing like a college education."

The battle raged. The Sophomores did succeed in getting down on the flags. But the other three Freshman banners flew, despite the frantic efforts of the Sophs, to yank them down. At the end of the "rush," with three out of their four banners intact, the Freshmen were declared winners.

BEATTIE MUST DIE ON NOVEMBER 24

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 15.—Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., must die November 24—the day originally set for his execution by Judge Watson of the Chesterfield Circuit Court.

Governor Mann to-day flatly declined to interfere in the case of the young Virginian convicted of killing his wife while automobiling on the Midlothian turnpike last July. He would neither commute the prisoner's sentence to life imprisonment, nor allow him a day's respite.

The Governor declared his belief that the condemned wife-murderer is guilty and that he should die at the time fixed when the lower court pronounced sentence.

TERRIFIC GALE ON THE BRITISH COAST

QUEENSTOWN, Nov. 15.—A terrific gale spread destruction along the English and Irish coasts to-day. An unknown steamer went ashore near here and it is feared that she will be a total wreck. The seas ran so high that the White Star liner Arabic was unable to land her passengers when she arrived here.

GERMAN AVIATOR KILLED BY PLUNGE

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—While making a flight in a monoplane of his own invention, Aviator Pietschker fell ninety feet to-day and was crushed to death.

New Cardinals Leaving for Rome

The picture shows Cardinal Diomede Falconio, the Papal Delegate, and Cardinal John M. Farley of New York walking down the gangplank to the liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie for the voyage to Cherbourg, where they will take the train for Rome. Cardinal Falconio is half way down the plank. Cardinal Farley is just stepping on the plank.

GREAT TRIBUTE FOR CARDINALS

Three cardinals of the Catholic church in America are now on the high seas on their way to Rome, where at a consistory in St. Peter's Cathedral on Nov. 27, they will be formally proclaimed cardinals and receive the red biretta and other insignia of their high office.

Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, who sailed from this city on the Canopic on Saturday, will arrive in Rome via Naples a few days ahead of Cardinal Farley of New York and Cardinal Falconio, apostle delegate to the United States. They sailed from New York yesterday on the German liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie, bound for Cherbourg.

Never before in the history of the Catholic church in the United States has there been such interest felt in the voyage of two steamships. The Godspeeds and prayers of millions of American Catholics of every race follow the liners on their way to Europe.

The appointment of three American cardinals at one time was an event never before recorded in the annals of the church in this country, and while but two of the new members of the Sacred College will return to this country as princes of the church, Cardinal Falconio, although he remains in Rome as a member of the personal household of Pope Pius X., will be classed as an American, for he has become an American citizen during his stay as the Papal delegate.

The Godspeeds to Archbishops Farley and Falconio as they left New York equalled in expressions of love and good wishes that which marked the departure of Cardinal O'Connell from this city. It is estimated that fully 100,000 persons took part in the demonstration in front of St. Patrick's Cathedral in Fifth avenue, New York, and at the pier in Hoboken as the liner slowly forged out of her slip. All along the New York water front and at vantage places on Staten Island were gathered thousands to wave farewell to the distinguished prelates who have been so signally honored by the Pope.

A tribute of honor almost unprecedented is being paid to the two cardinals by the captain of the Kronprinzessin Cecilie, for the liner is sailing with the Papal flag displayed at her masthead.

ACT ON RICHESON LETTER NOV. 24

The second letter of the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson asking the Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge to accept his resignation from the pastorate, cannot be acted upon by the church members until November 24, Clerk Charles F. Cummings of Belmont, declared to-day.

The accused minister's original letter of resignation was laid on the table until the regular business meeting of the church the latter part of this month, when it was first considered by the church members. No action on it or on the second letter is expected before that date.

It is possible that at the Friday evening prayer meeting this week the latest letter of the Rev. Mr. Richeson will be formally read and that a reply will be sent to the Charles Street Jail.

Cambridge people discussed with interest to-day just what effect the second letter would have, many of them inclining to the belief it would surely influence the vote in favor of accepting the resignation.

At the last church meeting for action on the letter of resignation the women members succeeded in defeating its acceptance by a vote of thirty to fifteen. This action, however, was later reconsidered and the letter placed on the table.

Seek Change of Venue.

It became known to-day that counsel for the defence are likely to make a motion for a change of venue for the trial of the murder charge. The attorneys who are to battle for the life of the minister are understood to have decided that public feeling in Suffolk county is such that an unprejudiced jury cannot be drawn, even from a long list of talesmen.

This motion is a familiar one in big trials where public opinion has been declared to be unfavorable to a client.

District Attorney Pelletier will make a fight in opposition to the proposed motion. He will declare that Suffolk county contains enough men who will be unprejudiced in so grave a matter as the one in question, despite the publicity which has been given the case.

No Surprise to Government.

It is expected that the motion by the defence will be made within a week. With the date of the trial set for January 15, just two months away, the lawyers for the accused are going ahead with their plans as rapidly as possible.

District Attorney Pelletier has been waiting such a move and its announcement will cause no surprise to the government.

In the recent history of criminal law in Massachusetts changes of venue have been frowned upon by the courts in murder cases.

MOVE BY TAFT TO END WAR

MILAN, Italy, Nov. 15.—A dispatch from Rome to-day intimates that President Taft has instructed the United States Ambassadors at Rome and Constantinople to sound the Italian and Turkish governments in regard to their attitude toward a proffer from the United States to mediate in the Tripolitan situation.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Italy has presented a final ultimatum to Turkey, threatening to seize the Turkish Islands of Lemnos and Mitylene in the archipelago of Asia Minor unless the Ottoman government within fourteen days recognizes Italy's proclamation of the annexation of Tripoli.

The mystery of the whereabouts of the Italian fleet in the Aegean Sea was solved to-day in dispatches which stated that nine battleships and a flotilla of torpedo boats had been sighted off Crete. The battleships are under Admiral Aubry.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—At a meeting of members of Parliament in Westminster to-day, at which prominent members of both parties were present, resolutions were adopted urging the British government to mediate in the war between Turkey and Italy.

POPE GETS DENIAL OF CRUELTIES BY THE ITALIAN ARMY

By EDWIN C. STRUTT.

ROME, Nov. 15.—Stories of alleged Italian atrocities in Tripoli which have appeared in a certain section of the English and American press, have caused the Pope to take the extraordinary step of making an official investigation of their truth or falsity through ecclesiastical channels.

I am informed by Monsignor Canali Under Secretary of State for the Vatican who has been appointed to succeed Monsignor Falconio as apostolic delegate to the United States, that the Pope, becoming greatly alarmed by the circulation of these rumors, instructed the apostolic delegate at Tripoli to communicate to him personally a detailed description of recent events.

The apostolic delegate has cabled a full report. It denies absolutely the accusations and praises the conduct of the Italian troops as brave, honorable and humanitarian.

FAVORS FIFTY-FIVE CENT GAS FOR LYNN

A communication from George M. Nichols, candidate for water commissioner, asking when his petition in regard to fifty-five-cent gas would be considered, started a discussion on gas rates at the session of the Lynn Municipal Council. The rate of the Lynn Gas & Electric Company is now eighty cents. In addressing Mr. Nichols, Mayor Connery remarked: "I am with you, and will go the full distance in a crusade for fifty-five-cent gas. You can not make the pace too fast for me to follow. I believe you are right when you assert that the Lynn Gas & Electric Co. can sell gas at fifty-five cents per 1,000 cubic feet at a profit."

WARREN FOR MALDEN POLICE COMMISSIONER

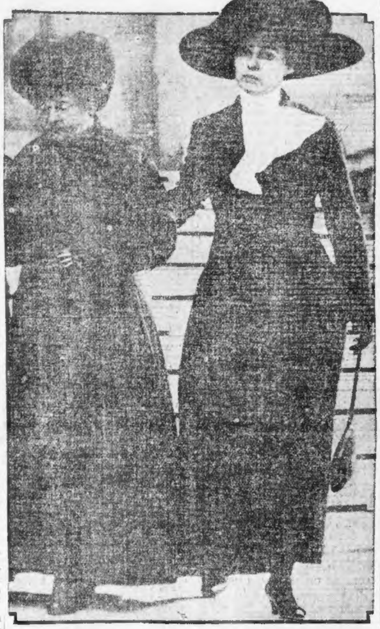

Former Mayor Charles G. Warren was named the first Police Commissioner of Malden at a meeting of the Aldermen by Mayor Fall. The appointment, which will come up for confirmation Tuesday evening, is a result of the vote on the referendum in the last election to determine whether the Police Department will be placed in charge of a Police Commissioner. Mr. Warren in 1906 was elected Mayor on the Republican ticket.

FIREMEN DRIVEN BACK BY FUMES

Squad after squad of firemen were overcome temporarily from the fumes of turpentine and denatured alcohol and worked in constant fear of explosions at a fire which caused a scare in the West End to-day, among the dwellers in a block of apartment houses on Lime street adjoining.

Spontaneous combustion started the blaze in the storeroom at the rear of a two-story brick building, No. 69 Chestnut street, and the inflammible stock in the paint shop on the first floor occupied by the Deitz Painting & Decorating Company, soon sent the flames shooting through all parts of the building.

George Deitz, president of the Deitz Painting & Decorating Company, with headquarters at No. 673 Boylston street, was in the Chestnut street wareroom with George Churchill, the shop manager, and Samuel Caru, a painter, when the fire was discovered. The flames travelled so rapidly that they were forced to rush to the street without their coats. A few minutes later there was a slight explosion, which startled the four men in the apartments of the Turkish & Persian Rug Repairing Company upstairs.

When the firemen arrived the lower part of the building was pretty well gutted. Chief Mullen quickly noted the danger of the fire. The storeroom where it started was heavily stored with all sorts of combustible stock, including barrels of turpentine, alcohol, paint, varnish and the like. These made fuel for the flames.

The smoke got into the apartment houses on Lime street in the rear and gave the occupants a bad scare. Firemen ran lines of hose through some of these houses and fought the flames from an areaway and Chestnut street. The fumes and gases from the burning paint shop quickly stifled the hosemen and they were forced to give place to frequent relays in order to escape serious consequences.

HARVARD MAN IN AUTO CRASH

A large touring car, driven and owned by Heyliger De Windt of Thayer Hall, Cambridge, early to-day ran into a coupe, driven by Samuel A. Richie of Malden, and owned by the P. S. Spiller Company of No. 262 Hanover street. The collision took place on Boylston street, near Clarendon. Richie was thrown from his seat and fell heavily to the ground.

De Windt is a senior at Harvard. He is manager of the football team and a member of many exclusive clubs.

TWO-ALARM FIRE IN WINTHROP CENTRE

Two alarms were sounded for a fire in the building at No. 36 Woodside avenue, Winthrop Centre. The building is one of a number of adjoining apartment houses, and the fire caused a big scare. When the firemen arrived they found the building filled with smoke, but the persons who live in it had reached the street in safety. The firemen kept the blaze in the cellar. The loss was about $1,000.

"QUO VADIS" AUTHOR SHOT WHILE HUNTING

VIENNA, Nov. 15.—A dispatch from Lemberg says that Henryk Sienkiewicz, the novelist, author of "Quo Vadis," was shot while shooting pheasants. The shooting was done by another of the party who aimed at a pheasant. Some of the shot lodged in the novelist's forehead near the left eye and his knee also was injured. He is now in a hospital at Warsaw.

SPENCER'S "STORY" OF SHOOTING

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 15.—A pathetic scene took place at the trial of Bertram G. Spencer for the murder of Miss Martha B. Blackstone, to-day, when the so-called confession of the young man was related on the witness stand by Inspector James H. Boyle.

Spencer rolled about in his cage and sobbed. His mother tried to calm him, but failed. Then she, too, buried her face in her handkerchief and sobbed in sympathy with her frenzied son. The outburst was so violent that it impeded the progress of the trial.

Describes Arrest of Spencer.

The court room was jammed and the audience was keyed to a high pitch of excitement. Boyle told about the arrest of Spencer. This had followed the finding of a locket with the initials "B. G. S." on it and the city directory did the rest.

"When he was arrested and taken to the station I talked to Spencer," testified Boyle. "He asked me what the charge was against him and I told him that he was charged with the murder of Miss Blackstone.

"He said to me that I had made a serious mistake, that he was an innocent man. He said that he could tell just where he had been that night and he told me about his movements. He said that he had bought candy from a dark girl and had walked on Main street. He said he had returned home about 8:30 or 9 o'clock.

"I told him that I thought I could fix the charge against him and he was locked up. Then I telephoned to Mrs. Dow and Miss Dow. They came to the station, but they could not identify Spencer as the man who had murdered Miss Blackstone and shot Miss Harriet Dow.

"The two women looked at the loot that had been obtained in the Spencer home and Miss Lucy Dow exclaimed: 'Why, mother, there is my belt.' Then after a time the mother said: 'Lucy, there is your pearl brooch.'

Said He Bought Belt.

"I took the Indian head belt and the brooch to Spencer and asked him where he got them. He said that he had bought the belt from an Indian woman in New Mexico four years before and that he had bought the brooch on Worthy street, Springfield, about six months before.

"Later that day I saw him and he said he had a headache and I got Dr. Joseph N. Boyer to attend him. Boyer gave him something and he went to sleep.

"At 8 o'clock the next morning, the morning of April 6, an officer told me that Spencer wanted to see me. I went to Spencer's cell and he said to me, 'Captain, can I see you alone? I want to talk with you.' I told him he could and that I was practically alone with him then. He said, 'Well, can't we go some place where I am sure we are alone?' I told him we could, and I unlocked his cell and took him to the detention room.

"He asked me there to close the door and the windows. Then he asked me to close the transom. He then said:

To Ease His Conscience.

"'Captain, I want to tell you the whole story of my life.' I said: 'Spencer, you are not obliged to, for anything you say relating to the charge against you can be used against you in court.' Spencer said: 'If your conscience troubled you as mine does me you'd tell and be glad to. And I'm going to tell and ease my conscience.'

"He then said:

"'You've got the right man, captain, that the police have been looking for for a long time. I shot those two women up on Round Hill, and I'm the masked burglar that has been terrorizing Springfield.

"'But I couldn't help it. Something came over me and I had to steal. I've stolen at every place where I was ever employed.

"'When I was a boy down in Connecticut my father used to beat me terribly. Once he struck me with the butt end of the whip on my head. The blow was so severe that it broke the butt off. It left me weltering in blood on the floor. I was never right afterwards, because from that time I had to steal and I couldn't get away from it.

"'That one idea was in my mind all the time. I was then fourteen years old. I stole a jackknife the first [illegible] village candy store and ever since then, from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, and all over the country I've been stealing and robbing.

"'I was at my work in Springfield this last year. I committed all those robberies in the evening in all those houses. That Indian bead belt I took from the Dow house. I lied to you when I said I bought it in New Mexico. The pearl pins I took from the Dow house also. I found them both in a bureau in the bedroom.

"'The Dow house was dark when I approached it from the rear and I didn't know that anybody was at home until, as I opened the door into the back parlor, I saw the four women playing a game.

"'I left my own house that night about 7 o'clock. I took a car from West Springfield and went up to Round Hill. I had no particular place to go, except to rob a house somewhere. I went up the roadway leading from the street to the house and around the side of the house I saw a shed.

"'I had on my new overcoat and a derby hat. Besides, I wore my ordinary working clothes. I had my belt and revolver buckled about me, and in my overcoat pocket I had my flashlight, the soft black hat and the black muffler that I used for a mask.

"'I took off my overcoat and derby hat behind the shed. I took off my shoes also. I put them in a pile by the corner of the shed, and I put on the soft felt hat, masked myself with the muffler, and with the flashlight in my trousers pocket made my way barefooted to the back of the house.

"Climbed in Window."

"I found one window open and climbed in. It led to a bedroom. The room was dark and I didn't think there was anybody in the house. I found the Indian bead belt on the dresser in the bedroom and put them in my pocket. I flashed my light about and saw a door. This led into a closet. Flashing the light again I saw another door. I opened this door and beyond was still another door. I had got into a dining room. I opened the other door, and there I saw four women in a lighted room playing a game. I was as much surprised as they were.

"One woman screamed. I told them to be quiet, that all I wanted was their money and didn't intend to hurt them. I put my flashlight in my pocket and drew my revolver. I thought I could scare them into silence.

Struck by a Woman.

"Then they all screamed. One grabbed me by the leg and another hit me with a chair. I heard voices all around me. I thought the house was surrounded, and then I fired so as to escape. When two of the women dropped to the floor that left my way to a door clear.

"I ran into the hallway, quickly opened the front door, jumped over the piazza rail and ran to the shed where I had left my clothes.

"I grabbed up my overcoat, hat and shoes and ran through the woods behind the house. At the foot of a big tree I rested a bit, put on my shoes and overcoat and substituted my derby hat for the black felt one that I wore in the house. The mask I had pulled off and stuck in my pocket, as I reached the piazza after the shooting.

"'After I had rested beneath the tree I went toward Main street, jumping a fence on the way. On Main street I met Officer Dowling. He was pulling in a box. I knew him from the time he worked in the street department, and I didn't want him to see me at just that time around that section. I knew he would tell of it in the morning. So I made a detour, through side streets, and he didn't see me. But he scared me for a while.

Goes Home to Bed.

"'I went down through Arch, North, Carew and Chestnut strets to the bridge over the river and to my home on Porter avenue. It was then about a quarter of nine. I cleaned and re-loaded my revolver and put it under my pillow. I put the flashlight under the pillow also. My wife was asleep. She had a coal fire burning in the stove, and I burned the soft felt hat in the fire.

"'I then went to sleep, and slept soundly during the night. I awoke at 6 o'clock in the morning and at quarter past six went to work.'"

Never before has there been a trial in this city where such intense interest was manifested by the public. Never before was there a man in the dock who lived such a dual life—a life that was a combination of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "Raffles."

Clerk and Burglar.

By day Spencer was a meek clerk. By night he was the most daring burglar the country has ever seen. Then came the tragic evening of March 31 of last year, when he appeared in the Dow house and shot two of four women, killing one and fracturing the skull of another so that she hovered a long time between life and death.

Citizens of Springfield who have most decided views on the Blackstone tragedy were still talking to-day of the sensational scene in court when the prisoner hysterically cried out his innocence.

"No! No!" he sobbed when District Attorney Callahan referred to the killing of the school teacher and the wording of the indictment charging the prisoner with the crime. He sobbed and panted like an infant, clutching the side of the cage and blubbered, while his wife leaned across his mother's lap and patted his hand, and whispered to him, trying to calm him.

Again, when reference was made to the shooting and the charge, the prisoner cried "No! My God, no, no!" And again, when the District Attorney eloquently and graphically described the scene when Spencer entered the house and shot down the school teacher, telling of Harriet Dow's effort to save her mother from possible attack, the prisoner broke down.

Harriet thrust a chair at the prisoner thinking to save her mother, when he leveled the revolver at her and said, "Well, then, if you want to die, die!" said the District Attorney, when Spencer broke out into a wail.

"O, I never said that!" he moaned, and rocked in the dock, while Turnkey Nathaniel P. Wade clutched his left arm and his wife and mother put their hands through the bars and endeavored to comfort him.

During Spencer's second outbreak the District Attorney seemed a little provoked, for he turned to Attorneys Young and Stapleton, who represent the defence and said, "Isn't this a little premature?" The lawyers made no response, but when the District Attorney had concluded his address, they asked that the remark be stricken from the record.

"O, I don't care anything about that," replied Mr. Callahan, and agreed to its being omitted.

The court room has been full of alienists. The eyes of all have been upon the trembling man in the prisoner's cage. Up to now District Attorney Callahan has refused to divulge the names of the experts he will call to offset the contention that the prisoner is insane, but it is known that among them will be Dr. Hosea M. Quimby of the Worcester Insane Hospital, Dr. Henry Fuller of the State Board of Insanity, and Dr. Tuttle. Dr. Alfred Elliott, superintendent of the Bridgewater State Hospital for the Criminal Insane, where Spencer was committed after his arraignment here a year ago, was in the courtroom also, and it is understood that he will be a witness for the Commonwealth.

Other experts in the courtroom were Dr. John A. Houston, superintendent of the Northampton Insane Hospital, who testified that Spencer was insane at the time of his first arraignment, Dr. Edward B. Lane of Boston, Dr. L. V. Briggs, just appointed to the State Board of Insanity, and Dr. Joseph W. Courtney of Boston.

A feature of the murder of Miss Blackstone hitherto untold was brought out in the examination of Miss Harriet Dow, who was also shot by the burglar. Miss Dow, in a voice exquisitely modulated, told how the robber had come into the room with his face masked and a pistol held in his hand.

Wept and Cried Out.

"I tried to save my mother," she said. "It was when I was trying to do so that the robber called to me: 'If you want to die, die now!'"

At this critical recital the prisoner again broke into hysterical sobs. He clutched through the grilled iron work for the comforting hand of his of his wife, who sat beside him. He kissed it and moaned: "I did not do it."

As he sits in the prisoner's cage, whether assumed or not, Spencer is visibly agitated. When District Attorney Callahan, in his opening address, said that outlaws were not protected by any second degree murder plea when they kill while committing burglary, Spencer shook like an aspen leaf.

His face was a veritable jelly. It quivered as if every little muscle was feverishly active, and with the prosecutor's voice, "He killed Martha B. Blackstone with malice," the ringing tones made the prisoner cry out in anguish and the tears gushed in torrents. Whenever the name of Miss Blackstone was mentioned the prisoner wept.

Miss Harriet Dow testified to practically the same facts. She said she saw the burglar shoot Miss Blackstone and then he pointed the revolver at her.

"Then all was darkness," said Miss Dow, "and I remembered no more for a long time."

Mrs. Sarah J. Dow, the mother, testified to the same facts.

The District Attorney was outlining his case to the jury. The court room was packed. The audience and the accused prisoner were tense with excitement. The tragic scene of the night of the murder, when Spencer, masked and armed, broke into the Dow home, was reached. Graphically Mr. Callahan described it. Spencer trembled. He shrank. Then, his face livid and his muscles twitching, he leaped to his feet.

Second Outbreak By Prisoner.

The District Attorney resumed. Every nerve in the room was pulsating with excitement. Callahan told how Spencer shot Miss Blackstone through the heart, how he shot at Mrs. Dow and then pointing his revolver at Miss Harriet Dow, cried:

"Do you want to die? Then die now!"

Again the prisoner leaped to his feet. He acted as though he would leap from the cage. He was hysterical. He cried wildly to the District Attorney:

"My God, I never said that—I never said that!"

He was quieted the second time and the District Attorney finished his address.

The District Attorney told how Spencer suddenly entered the Dow home on Round Hill, this city, on the night of March 31, last year, surprising Mrs. Dow, her two daughters, Harriet and Lucy, and Miss Martha B. Blackstone. He wore a black felt hat pulled down over his eyes. He wore a black handkerchief over the lower part of his face as a mask. Belted to his waist was a holster containing a revolver.

The women screamed. Miss Blackstone tried to escape. Spencer shot her through the heart. He shot at Mrs. Dow. He shot Harriet Dow in the head. He threatened to shoot the oher Dow girl. Then he made his escape.

Spencer cowered in his seat as he listened to the District Attorney. He shivered at times. He wept, wiping the tears from his eyes with a handkerchief. He had begun the day by a breakdown when he caught sight of his wife and his mother in the corridor of the court room. He began to weep and when he was led, handcuffed, into the court room to take his place in the dock, he was all a-tremble.

MUCH SYMPATHY FELT FOR THE FAITHFUL HELPMEET OF THE ACCUSED.

The courtroom was jammed. Many of those present were women. As the feeling over the case runs very high—Spencer had terrorized Springfield for two years—the audience in the courtroom followed the address of Mr. Callahan very closely.

The District Attorney recited the tragic events of the night of March 31 of last year, when Spencer shot Miss Blackstone and Miss Harriet Dow, with whom Miss Blackstone was stopping. The audience shuddered.

Denounces Crime as Fiendish.

"It was one of the most horrible and fiendish crimes that was ever perpetrated," exclaimed the District Attorney.

Spencer twisted and turned in his seat as though he had been struck with the lash of a whip. The people in the court room were tense with emotion. Hundreds of people who were unable to get in waited on the outside of the courthouse.

LOOSEN CORSETS AND BE CHEERY

Baroness Posse Declares Stays Ruin Women's Dispositions and Makes Life Sad.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

If you have a bad disposition—let out your corset strings—that is, of course, unless you're a man, then there's no hope for you anyway. But if you're a woman and your circulation is poor, your digestion on the war-path and your good nature gone to the bow-wows, loosen up a bit and lo, all life will be rosy once more.

That's what the Baroness Posse, one of the best-known physical directors in town, says, and she says it from experience, and she knows.

"It won't be many years before women discard the corset altogether. Look at the difference in the figures now and in our grandmother's days, when small waists and ill health went hand in hand. Now the whole tendency is toward the Greek type of beauty and the waists have expanded marvelously. Every thought now is of grace, and when a woman is bundled up bit in stiff corsets there can be but little grace about her," the Baroness said when I asked her what she thought about it.

"Naturally when the circulation is better, digestion better, the dispositions are better and consequently we have a happier and a handsomer lot of women. The Baroness Rose Posse declares the tendency of to-day is toward the Greek type and waists have grown more ample.

banishing of the corset or the hour-glass figure also banished the insipid clinging-vine type of woman."

There's some troublesome ex-minister to the United States from China, one Dr. Wu Ting Fang by name, who started all the trouble by writing a book about the already much-abused American woman. Among other things he says that the American woman is no more free than other women, for her corsets are as bad looking as the tiny shoes of the Chinese women. The revolution in China came along and interrupted the finishing of this wonderful book—but it's surely coming and we just wanted to be prepared for it so we can "save aback." If by that time we feel so inclined.

The revolutionists, of whom Dr. Wu is one of the leaders, intend to open up China to Western ideas of progress. This will, of course, mean that tradition will eventually be overturned regarding foot binding, and that Chinese women will be allowed to have natural, no mid-Victorian feet without losing caste or being conspicuous.

Demand More Freedom.

Western women are likewise casting off their bonds, by which is meant the corset and society and the stage combine with teachers of hygiene to banish aforesaid atrocious tight lacing.

Baroness Posse has made a special study of women for years and she works along the principle that "when you remove the cause you cure the effect." The cause is tight lacing and the effect is all sorts of hysterics, nervousness, bad digestion and bad dispositions.

"I guess Dr. Wu doesn't realize that the American woman of to-day who squeezes her waist is the exception. Women, in order to keep slender proportions, are taking more exercise, and this is making the demand for more freedom of movement. At the same time it is developing muscles sufficiently strong to hold up the body rather than have it dependent upon stays. Every woman has a natural corset of muscles and spines she paralyzes this with tight lacing she is able to hold herself properly. Then she will accumulate less flesh and in the end have a better figure.

"The modern woman needs courage, independence of mind and body. Exercise in the open air, her general sense of freedom and control naturally gives her more courage, and the clinging vine in these days would have a desperate time of it in struggling to keep up with the procession. The muscles of the body should be so well developed that they would need no guidance from corsets to keep the body in position.

"An unnaturally small waist, such as our grandmothers prized, is now looked upon as quite as much of a deformity as the tiny feet of Chinese women. The Chinese custom of squeezing the feet originated, as did the American custom of squeezing the waist, in a mistaken idea of pleasing the men. Women are more independent in the ideas of men nowadays and few of those are willing to ruin their health and make themselves subjects of continued torture in order to please men's fickle fancy. And so the men are being educated up to the large waist and the good disposition in preference to the hour-glass figure and bad temper." And the Baroness looked so serious about it I knew it must be true.

Makes Tempers Better.

"Our women to-day are too active both mentally and physically—they are too interested in the million and one interesting things about them and too busy making the most of life to be hampered by tight corsets," she went on. "Never have there been so many women who wear no corsets at all as there are to-day. They wear loose girdles or waists. In fact, the corseless figure or the one giving that appearance is the stylish figure, and it won't be long before all the corsets are in the ash heap.

"The famous statue of the Venus de Medici is considered a perfect type of feminine beauty. She is five feet two inches tall and her waist measure is twenty-seven inches. That stout waist is natural and normal and what we are all coming to.

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH

Pleasant, Simple, But Safe and Effectual Cure For It.

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY.

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered next thing to incurable. The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery eructations of gases, causing pressure on the heart and lungs and difficult breathing, headaches, poor appetite, nervousness and a general played-out, languid feeling.

There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue, and if the interior of the stomach could be seen it would show a glassy, inflamed condition.

The cure of this common and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be quickly, thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach. To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is the one necessary thing to do, and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlowson, the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Diastase, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux, Golden Seal and fruit acids. These tablets are now to be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and, not being a patent medicine, can be used with safety and every assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

The glad eat dieting is simply another name for starvation, and the use of prepared foods and new-fangled breakfast foods simply makes matters worse, as any dyspeptic who has tried them knows.

As Dr. Bennett says, the only reason I can imagine why Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not universally used by everybody who is troubled in any way with poor digestion, is because many people seem to think that because a medicine is advertised or is sold in drug stores or is protected by a trade-mark it must be a humbug, whereas, as a matter of truth, any druggist who is observant knows that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have cured more people of catarrh of the stomach, indigestion, heartburn, heart trouble, nervous prostration and run-down condition generally, than all the patent medicines and doctors' prescriptions for stomach trouble combined.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest preparation, as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy for any form of indigestion, catarrh of the stomach, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn and bloating after meals.

MISS ELDER FOR BALLOT LIMIT

Miss Margaret M. Elder, who has become one of the most prominent advocates of the ballot for women, admitted in the course of her address in the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association's study course that her father, Samuel J. Elder, the noted lawyer, was opposed to woman suffrage. But Miss Elder intimated that she was hopeful her distinguished father would yet see the light on equal suffrage as so many other noted men have, and that he was open to argument on the question.

Miss Elder, speaking on "Women and Democracy," objected decidedly to removing all limits on the ballot which would permit children to vote as suggested by someone in the audience.

No Children Vote.

"I certainly don't think children ought to vote," she said, "although the tendency nowadays is to give children more say in matters pertaining to them. I believe that twenty-one years is plenty young enough for people to begin using the suffrage. Nor did I ever say, as was reported in a Boston paper—a report which made me simply furious—that I believed in giving paupers the vote. Absurd!

"As far back as 1776 Americans decided that taxation without representation is tyranny, therefore when Mr. Saunders, speaking for the antis, says that taxation has nothing to do with voting, he apparently would be at home in a country such as 'Alice' got into when she stepped through the looking glass. You remember what the 'Queen' said to 'Alice': 'It takes all the running you can do to keep in the same place.'

What Antis Lack.

"The claims of anti-suffragists are in direction of ill-digested developments of modern political science, showing a lack of understanding of the great reinforcements to the theory of democracy which have appeared during the last century.

"Modern democracy is based on the recognition, not only scientific, but by the man on the street and the politician in office, that will is the basic and determining factor today. A true democracy aims to find out what is the wish or will of the people, and it believes that the will of the people is a good will; it is founded in a method of faith in people and in the people. Sovereignty, then, is the will of the people.

"So that the first duty of the State is to find the aggregate good will. And in doing this all normal members of the state must be asked their wishes, must register their will."

WINTHROP 'LID' ON SUNDAY SHOW

Winthrop's Sabbath "lid" which some months ago was clapped down on baseball is now suppressing Sabbath shows. In consequence the Sunday license of the Dream Theatre, the only motion picture show in the town, has been held up.

A meeting has been called for tomorrow evening in the Town Hall. It will be attended by the selectmen, a committee of the Winthrop's Minister's Association and a delegation from Winthrop Lodge of Elks.

The theatre has been in operation since Summer. Last Sunday night the proprietors were not allowed to give the customary Sabbath evening bill because the selectmen refused a permit. Certain ministers oppose shows on Sunday. They say they are distracting and injurious to morals. Supporters of the Sunday evening performances assert the pictures are educational and that young folks are safer there than on the streets.

The proprietors say they give one half of the Sunday evening receipts to the Winthrop Lodge of Elks for charitable purposes.

Those at the head of the motion picture crusade are said to be the sponsors of the baseball agitation as a result of which an appeal was sent to Washington, and while the soldiers at Fort Banks were permitted to play the game, authorities forbade outsiders witnessing Sunday contests.

OPERA HOUSE SEAT SALE NEXT MONDAY

DO YOU WANT TO GET RID OF YOUR GRAY HAIR

Prof. Hoffer Declares His Newly Invented Comb Will Accomplish This.

Local medical circles are discussing with much interest the report of Prof. Hoffer, the noted dermatologist of Berlin, who announces the invention of a comb which will restore gray or discolored hair to its natural color by merely combing as with an ordinary comb.

So great is the demand for information about this comb that the H. D. Coon Company, of 124 E. 28th street, New York, Prof. Hoffer's American representatives have had his book "Das Buch der Haare" (The Book of the Hair), translated into English and are now mailing it to those who request a copy.

The book describes the use of the comb and contains much valuable information as the treatment of gray, faded or strained hair on which Prof. Hoffer is a recognized authority.

LONDON PASTOR PRAISES BOSTON

By SYBIL WARNE.

Boston has made good as the Athens of America. Saved is our reputation for spectacles, beans, baked beans, Emerson and deep stuff.

Too often has the outsider in the cold dollars and cents world of New York, or the dweller from the Chicago stock yards, heard of Boston culture, and after coming here has gone away to scoff.

But not so, oh, a half dozen times, joyful times, not so with the Rev. R. J. Campbell, the famous English preacher from the City Temple, London. He had heard all his life of Boston culture. He came and he is now in our midst. Arnold Bennett, the author, found Boston as English as a muffin, you will remember. Well, Dr. Campbell—blessings on him—found Boston as cultured as a Roman holiday or the Appian Way itself. Succinon a couple of hundred of Tom Dreier's very best therefore in thanks to the doctor.

For the past four days he has been staying at the Hotel Vendome and lecturing before many times.

He is carried away with the hospitality that he has received and thinks that Boston is not only the hub of the universe but it can claim many of the spokes.

Calling it "a state of mind" is very acceptable to him as he has found the average person in Boston more interested in moral and intellectual questions than in any other city that he has so far visited. Philadelphia is too conservative for him. They do not talk theology in New York like they do in this city.

Christian unity appears to him to have made greater strides in America than in England, but he asserts that England is far ahead of America in Biblical criticism. Dr. Elliot's "Future of Religion," the book which created such an impression two years ago, is one after his own heart.

Mr. Campbell terms it an intellectual treat to be here in Boston, for the people can talk about something else besides dress and "How much is your wenig?"

At his hotel he talked freely of how he was enjoying himself in this city. Among other things he said:

"Boston is a theological centre. In saying this I am not forgetful of what New York stands for. People in that city do not give the time and thought to theology that you are doing in this city.

A Theological Centre.

"In Philadelphia I found a very conservative atmosphere which in all probability could not exist in Boston. No city takes such an interest in the questions of theology as Boston. It is, therefore, refreshing to come here and mingle with so many thinking men and women. I had a delightful time last Saturday afternoon in addressing the Twentieth Century Club. It seems to me that such a club composed of so many vital interests could not exist in any other city but Boston.

"I suppose when Boston is called a state of mind, you mean this: It means that the average person has not lost his interests in intellectual and moral questions and the questions that concern life.

"Then abroad, when you know that Boston has said something, we take notice. By this I mean we want to know what Boston has to say about each interesting question. We instinctively feel that it will be worth listening to.

"It is not simply your culture, your intellectuality, but your constant progress in theological matters that impress us.

"Your own Dr. Gordon of the old South Church has a wide-spread influence with us in England.

"I shall always cherish my visit here and the constant, generous hospitality that I have received.

"I have enjoyed going to Concord and looking at the resting place of Emerson. I also visited Trinity Church, just to glance at the pulpit of the prophet who preached there so many years. Phillips Brooks, whose words and thoughts are still quoting me in England to-day.

"Your city makes me feel at home more than any other city. It seems so much like one of our own. I suppose others have referred to it, but it has struck me so forcibly, as I have gone about, and I have felt very much at home and have been splendidly treated by your leading citizens."

"Do you think that we are moving ahead in the line of Christian unity?" was asked.

"You seem to have made greater advances towards Christian unity than we have in England. There is on the one side the Church of England as by law established, and then there are the other Christian bodies. These have come closer together, but then I do not think that the Episcopalians of England advanced as far as they have here in America. Episcopalians here mingle more with the other Christian bodies than they do in England."

Approves Eliot's Religion.

"Do you believe in Dr. Eliot's 'Religion of the Future?'" was put to the doctor after he had been discussing for some time the general tendencies of religious belief in both countries.

"In the main I do," was his quick response, and it represents on the whole my views upon many of the matters which it discusses. But you know that we in England are ahead of you in America in many matters bearing upon Biblical questions, which would be considered unorthodox here in America.

"I do not think that this criticism, however, applies to Boston. It might apply to Philadelphia. You are so willing to bear any new interpretation in Boston. You are willing to go on investigating matters and you keep your minds active with constant study. In other words, you set a value upon culture and intelligence here.

"If any seeker after truth comes to Boston he will be welcomed. If he says certain things which might be termed heterodox, he will not be cast aside.

"It is this atmosphere that is so charming here. If we have anything settled in theology there may come a time when we are going to unsettle it and put something better in its place. If it is better, and can be proven to be better, Boston will give it a place. It is this that makes the theological climate so acceptable. I am not here to deny anything, but to reaffirm it under a different conception.

"It is an intellectual treat to be in Boston for this reason. You are not afraid to think, you are not afraid to think something differently than you have been thinking."

A Silken Lustre To the Dullest Hair

Fadden's Method

"Proper care of hair and scalp does not mean time-consuming and expensive trips to the hairdresser's. Simplicity is the keynote—just an occasional brushing of scalp and hair on which has been sprinkled a tablespoonful of dry shampoo mixture. This is brushed through and out of the hair, and with it comes all dust, dandruff and excess oil.

"To prepare the dry shampoo, mix together either 4 ounces of orris root or cornmeal and 4 ounces therox. Keep in sifter-top can and use once or twice each week. After a few shampoos dull, 'stringy,' lifeless or brittle hair grows wondrously soft, silky and lustrous. Continued using induces a luxuriant growth."

EDDY CASE DECISION RESERVED BY COURT

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 15.—The Supreme Court reserved decision after hearing arguments on the motion of counsel for George W. Glover of Lead, S. D., to have remanded to the Superior Court Glover's suit to have declared invalid the residuary clause of the will of his mother, Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, founder of the Christian Science Church. The case was sent to the Supreme Court for the determination of certain points of law involved. Counsel for the plaintiff argued that the hearing in the Supreme Court should be allowed to continue and that after a decision had been rendered by that tribunal an appeal could be taken by either side to the Supreme Court.

VACCINATE 1100 SCHOOL PUPILS

PAWTUCKET, Nov. 15.—Fearing that the smallpox prevalent in the Pawtuxet Valley might break out in this section, the Rev. Fr. Brenier, in charge of the Notre Dame Parochial School, has ordered that the 1,100 pupils shall be examined, and that those who have not been vaccinated shall be inoculated. The school is one of the largest parochial schools in the country.

The health authorities in the Pawtuxet Valley, now have 78 cases of smallpox on their lists today. Efforts to arrest the spread of the epidemic by vaccination and isolation, were continued with greater vigor as the boldness of the two cases in Warwick and Coventry, is beginning to feel the epidemic, while all the physicians of the district are working day and night taking care of the sufferers.

Vaccination of the 1,000 employees of the mills owned by the Goddards in Warwick, has been begun. Superintendent James F. Ferguson issued a statement branding as "ridiculous" a report that the cases could be traced to the cotton in that mills.

PACKERS WIN FIRST ROUND

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Chicago millionaire packers will escape trial for many months and perhaps years as the result of the expected move of their attorneys to quash writs of habeas corpus for the release of nine of the indicted men who were expected to go to trial for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law next Monday.

It became evident to-day when United States District Attorney Wilkerson and lawyers for the packers announced that no matter how Judge Kohlsaat might rule on the writs sought by the packers, asserting that the Sherman law is unconstitutional, the case would be immediately appealed to the United States Supreme Court.

Upon the final decision of the Supreme Court depends the life of the biggest trust which the United States has in dealing with the trusts.

Little Girl Tells Own Story of Joyous Visit to Toy Shops

Newton Girl Describes the Great Variety of Novelties Which Santa Claus Presents.

Here is the story of Eleanor Hart, eight years old, of Newton, who tells of the wonderful Christmas toy displays she saw in the big Boston stores:

By ELEANOR HART.

I told my mamma, I wanted to go to see the toys. She said she would take me some day. I went yesterday. I was so happy to see so many pretty things! I saw, first of all, a cat. It was a large cat with gray fur. You never saw such a large cat in a toy department before. It can meow when you shake it a little. I shook it several times, and it meowed for me. Then it can walk just like a cat that I have at home. A woman had her picture taken with the cat in her arms. I sat on the donkey when my picture was taken.

Eleanor Hart, enjoying visit to toy department of a Boston store, while on her rounds of the Christmas displays.

Now do you want to know all that I saw in the toy place? Let me see. I saw a pig that when you draw it along it squeals just like a real pig. It made me laugh to hear it. My mother laughed, too.

Then I saw a swan that looks just like a real swan, and it moves its head all around. You have to wind it up before it will do this.

I saw a stage coach with horses. Not the little horses that you see, but the great big horses. The woman told my mother that this was the first time that such large horses and a coach were ever brought to this country as toys.

When I was looking at a little doll, my mother called to me to see a fish. You hold it in your hand, and it wriggles just like a fish, when you make your wrist go.

Then they have fish there almost as big as I am. When you put it into the water it floats.

Many Wonderful Toys.

I saw a fire boat that squirts water just like a real one. Though I am a girl. I'd like to have one of these better than a doll.

But the best thing that I liked, was Hotel Santa Claus. My! it was pretty. It was all covered over with some kind of bark and dolls were sitting on the roof and on the sides of it.

Then I saw a dog that comes out of his house and barks. I suppose that you have to wind him up before he will do this.

Then I saw a bear that smokes a cigarette and what do you think I saw, one bear that can drink. Little dogs that move their feet when you draw them along, were there, too.

But I never saw so many dolls. The woman that showed us some told my mother that one in the case standing up cost $100.

Then I saw all the things for a doll house. Everything that you could think of. They have make-believe salads, vegetables, eggs and other things to put on the doll table. They just look like eggs, fried eggs, I mean, but they are not. They are only make-believe.

One thing I liked best of all. It was a music box with little girls all around on the top of it. When you turned a crank they danced around and it was good music, too. I'd like to have that.

Then I saw lots of other things. I saw a toy with a woman chasing a mouse. It made the woman go right across the floor. Then I saw a toy with a woman with a hobble skirt and one with another kind of skirt. They did look so funny. You have just to wind them up and they dance. Let me see what else did I see?

I saw a boy kicking a football.

Games There, Too.

I saw so much that I cannot remember all. They have little grocery stores, too.

I pulled a string on the cow and it made a noise. It was a big cow and I could get on its back. Then I went over to a big bear, and pulled the string there, and it made a noise just like a bear.

I never saw so many games. I think I will have a game for Christmas and some of those other things that I saw.

All the department stores are filled with many novelties in the toy line. There are more this year than ever before.

Miss Katherine Lugrin, of one of the department stores, has spent three months traveling through Europe looking after new things. The representatives in the other stores have done the same, and the collection this year is larger and more varied than ever before.

Miss Alice McNulty posed for a picture of the cat, that is a most recent toy in the market, as it looks like a cat, can meow, wag its tail and walk just like a cat across the floor.

DEEP MYSTERY IN MIX DEATH

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Much mystery surrounds the supposed suicide of Edgar W. Mix, an American, and one of the best known aeronautical sportsmen in Europe as well as in America.

According to the report received by Consul General Mason, Mix left London last Saturday night for Paris and disappeared while on the channel steamer as it was nearing Calais. On the vessel were found an overcoat supposed to be that of Mix, and a note directing the captain to forward the apparel to Pierre Hablizig, private secretary to Mix. The note bore the missing sportsman's name. There was nothing else in the overcoat besides twelve English shillings.

Mix had been in London for some time in attendance at a conference of automobile engineers. He carried extensive luggage and was known to be in possession of considerable funds. When he left the hotel in London he took his baggage. This has not been found on the steamer nor have the authorities located it at any other place.

No Reason for Suicide.

Mix's friends in Paris are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the note which he is said to have left on the steamer. They will not believe that the famous engineer-balloonist committed suicide until they are able to identify the handwriting. They are also puzzled to know what became of his baggage and money.

Herto Berg, a personal friend of Mix, who expected to accompany him to Rome to-day as a delegate to the international aeronautical conference, was stunned by the news. He could give no reason for the suicide and was inclined to believe the balloonist was the victim of foul play. Consul General Mason has asked both the French and English authorities to look for the body along the channel.

By ARNOLD KRUCKMAN.

Edgar W. Mix, formerly of Lynn, Mass., was considered one of the most skillful balloon pilots in the world. In 1909, as the representative of America, he won the international cup race by a trans-continental trip. This race brought to America the much-coveted cup, for which the next year Hawley and Post made the flight which took them far into the interior of Canada.

With Alfred LeBlanc in 1907 he piloted the balloon L'Isle de France, which finished second in the international race which was won by the German balloon Pommern, piloted by Oscar Erbsloeh. Starting at St. Louis, Mix landed at Herbertsville, N. J., after covering a little less than 857 miles. The Pommern made 872 miles, landing at Asbury Park, N. J.

In the 1909 balloon race Mix covered 648.94 miles, starting from Zurich. Mr. Mix was the only American contestant in the race in which seventeen balloons started. His balloon was the America II. He landed near Warsaw, in Russian Poland, early on the third day out from Zurich, defeating, among others, Alfred LeBlanc, his companion in the St. Louis race. He was arrested by the police of Ostrolonka, but was released upon the order of the late Premier Stolypin.

He was formerly connected with the General Electric Company of Lynn, Mass., and until November 1 was chief engineer in the French branch of the Thompson & Houston Electric Company, when he resigned to go with the Detroit concern. Two sisters, Mrs. Henry R. French and Mrs. Jessie M. Holden, reside in Lynn.

He had not been in America for a number of years nor visited his home, within a few miles of Columbus, O., since leaving in 1888. On the flight from St. Louis the balloon in which he rode passed directly over the old home, and Mix dropped a note addressed to his aunts, who lived there. After his participation in the St. Louis race, Mix did not return to America until last year, when he was entertained by the Aero Club of America.

Mix was not married, and lived in Paris where his quarters were the rallying place of practically every American of note in the French capital. He was a man of exceptional charm, but frail in health.

NO SETTLEMENT IN SODEN SUIT

Frederick J. Daggett, attorney for Frederick L. Small, to-day denied having admitted the $500,000 suit filed by his client against Arthur H. Soden, the former baseball magnate, for the alleged alienation of Mrs. Small's affections, has been privately settled out of court.

"I never admitted any such thing," said Mr. Daggett to an AMERICAN reporter, when asked to confirm a story to that effect, as printed in a Boston morning paper. "At present I cannot, in justice to myself and my client, as well as the others involved in the suit, say anything one way or the other. Any information regarding the matter must come from some other source. If Benjamin N. Johnson, counsel for Mr. Soden, wishes to discuss the suit well and good, but under the circumstances it would be unwise for me to say anything in regard to the suit just at this time."

It was declared that the amount paid in settlement was $15,000.

Judge Brown refused to hear the case in the Superior Court last Spring, owing to the nature of the charges made by Small against Soden, and former Judge Robert O. Harris heard the evidence in private. It was recommended by Judge Harris that Soden pay $10,000 to Small in full settlement.

Morgan is a graduate of the British College of Physical Education, of London, and held the position of instructor to the undergraduates of Cambridge University, England.

KANE NEVER "OVERLOADS"

WEST WARREN, Nov. 15.—R. James Kane says he never overloads his stomach.

The conversation started on champion eaters and a chap in Gardner named Holland, who claims to be a wonder.

"I never overload my stomach," said R. James Kane, "but I think nothing of going into a restaurant and ordering this:

One-half bushel boiled onions.
Plate boiled potatoes.
Three orders pork chops.
Seven or eight slices bread.
Four cups black coffee.
Two or three glasses water.
Few cuts of pie.

"But," continued R. James Kane, "one time on a wager I ate four quarts of baked beans, one and one-half loaves of bread, eleven hot dogs, and drank six cups of black coffee and two glasses of water in eleven minutes.

"But I never overload my stomach. I eat till I'm filled up and then wait till the next meal comes around."

Removing This Brick Pillar Will Cost Us the Round Sum of $40,000!

The opening of our new store at corner Broadway and 41st street, in the Broadway Theatre Building, which was set for December 1st, must be postponed until early Spring. The Engineers are unable to remove the brick pillar, shown in the picture, for our corner windows, without elaborate truss steel work, which will take months to make and set. As a result of this unlooked-for obstacle, we have on our hands the immense stock of goods for this store, which we made up specially for the best Broadway trade. To dispose of it quickly we divided this stock among our eight stores (over $20,000 worth going to our Boston store), and reduced the prices on everything regardless of cost or value. It certainly would be extravagance on your part to miss this sale. Such bargains as these, at this early part of the season, are remarkable to say the least.

GETTEMY FOR NEW TAX LAWS

Charles F. Gettemy, director of the Massachusetts Bureau of Statistics, told the National Municipal League Convention at Richmond, Va., to-day that Massachusetts cities and towns evade the intent of the State laws on municipal indebtedness and announced that he will ask the Legislature to remedy the trouble. He said:

"Three principal reasons may be assigned for the failure of the Massachusetts law relating to municipal indebtedness to more adequately accomplish its purpose, namely: First, the indefinite language in which certain of its provisions are drawn; second, the ineffectiveness of the method provided for the enforcement of the law, and third, the ease with which cities and towns have been able to secure legislation exempting them from the operation of the law in special cases.

REDUCED THIRTY POUUDS IN THIRTY DAYS

NEW DRUGLESS TREATMENT FOR FAT FOLKS PROVES SUCCESSFUL.

The truth of the claim made by W. L. Schmitz, of Montevideo, Minn., and Dr. J. T. Bright, of Covington, Kentucky, that they reduced their weight thirty pounds in thirty days has been fully established. The facts are proven by careful investigation.

It has been shown that Dr. Bright, of Covington, Ky., is an eminent physician with forty years' practice to his credit, yet he was powerless, with all his drugs and medicines, to reduce his enormous weight, and he was obliged to purchase the Marjorie Hamilton drugless fat reducing treatment in order to pull down his enormous rolls of fat.

W. L. Schmitz, of Montevideo, Minnesota, was another astonishing case, where the enormous amount of fat reduced by him was disputed by some people until the actual proofs were made.

Marjorie Hamilton, the famous Calendar Girl of Denver, now stands in lone distinguishment as the founder of her great flesh reducing treatment without drugs, without dieting, and with no medicine, apparatuses or harmful exercises. Her treatment is a God-send to fat humanity, and it is said that nearly two hundred women assistants are necessary to enable her to carry on her enormous business in Denver, which occupies immense floor space in one of the largest buildings in that city.

It is said that French actresses and court ladies of Europe are in ecstacies over the marvelous results of this new drugless treatment, which enables the social set to keep down their ponderous weight and reduce their forms to beautiful proportions.

The new drugless treatment of this famous Calendar Girl is enabling womankind to so beautify their figures as to bring to their feet the whole kingdom of man and every worldly joy.

It is evident that the Marjorie Hamilton drugless treatment is destined to overshadow all others, and competitors are now appalled with her stupendous success, and stand aghast in amazement marveling at her wondrous skill.

Marjorie Hamilton absolutely controls the fat market of the world with her drugless fat reducing treatment, which reduced her own weight thirty-seven pounds in five weeks, and which has given her in six months' time the largest business of its kind in the world.

Miss Hamilton believes that honesty does live and that progress is real, and she is the first on earth to prove absolutely that there is a positive, simple drugless treatment of permanent fat reduction.

It is said that 200,000 fat men and women in all parts of the world have written to Marjorie Hamilton for her valuable book, entitled "Weight Reduction Without Drugs," which she sends free in her eagerness to benefit fat folks and to enable them to learn of her remarkable treatment, so that they may remove their fat and know the joy of a form of grace and beauty.

Any readers who desire to remove excess weight should write for a copy of the book at once, before the last edition is exhausted. Address: Marjorie Hamilton, Suite 2647, Central Bank Bldg., Denver, Colo.

Joys and Glooms at Wellesley

DOROTHY APLEGATE

Miss Applegate is devoting her college career at Wellesley to amassing a students' building fund. This now totals more than $23,000.

Because of the raising of the students' building fund, the Joys and Glooms have made their appearance at Wellesley College. This fact was made known by an article which appeared in the Free Press column of the latest number of the College News. The girls have taken advantage of the F. P. column to voice their sentiments on the proposed project, and Miss Dorothy Applegate, 1912, who has dedicated her college career to the raising of funds for it, is plunged in the deepest of gloom—all because the girls are not sure they want the building after all.

Miss Applegate is the originator of a number of schemes by which money may be raised for the fund. Last year she nearly ruined the Wellesley Inn and the village tea room by instituting fast days. She got up "silent dinners." The rule was that if any girl giggled or betrayed the sign of laugh, said girl would pay a fine, to be turned into the fund. Her latest venture, however, is something unique. She has organized a bootblack parlor in the basement of College Hall, and made it pay. Miss Applegate was shrewd enough to enlist celebrities to wield the brush, with the result that freshmen came flocking for the honor of having Miss Goss, the senior president, or Miss Applegate herself black their shoes.

Yes, Miss Applegate knows how to handle the brushes, etc. She is an adept at it, too. You ought to see how she can make a shoe look like the sun on a warm Summer's day! Her prowess in that direction would put any of our Boston bootblacks—and they are famous for the kind of shine they produce on one's shoes—to the bad.

Miss Applegate is known by the girls as "True Dollar Princess of the College Beautiful," "Students' Shylock," and "Wellesley Cash Register." She is deeply interested in the raising of money for the students' building fund, and makes no bones about letting that fact be known, either. She bids fair to make her mark in the world.

A feeling of dissatisfaction has been steadily growing, not only among outsiders, as the College News states, but among the undergraduates. There is grumbling that Wellesley classes are much too large for their instructors to handle. There is great need for a new science building.

"Why, do you know," said one senior who is specializing in chemistry, "that old shed of a chemistry building with its cluttered laboratories is a shame and a disgrace to the college. And yet we go right on building big dormitories and putting our money into a students' building. Of course, the students' building will be a splendid thing, but I don't believe that it is going to help the academic standing of the average girl."

MUTT AND JEFF ARE REAL STARS

By FRED J. McISAAC.

"Now before you go," said Bud Fisher, "just get out of your mind that this is a lot of rough stuff and slap-stick comedy, because it isn't. "Mutt and Jeff" is a high-class musical comedy. It's a regular drama, full of pretty girls and pretty music and expensive scenery. Nothing cheap about it. If you want to see a burlesque show go somewhere else. This is clean, fast comedy.

"As a matter of fact," continued Mr. Fisher, "they could leave Mutt and Jeff out of it and it still would be an elegant show. Got that all straight? All right then. Go ahead and give us a real dramatic criticism of it.

"Why," continued Mr. Fisher, "we had to cut some of the laughs out of it so as the audience could get the plot. You can't depend on the laughs. Why fifty boobs might be killing themselves laughing and the rest of the audience saying, 'Cut that stuff and give us something serious.' We give everybody what they want."

Whereupon Mr. Fisher shook me heartily by the hand and I departed for the Globe Theatre. Like everybody who reads Mutt and Jeff in the AMERICAN, I had expected something in the way of low comedy where the kicking of Jeff in the face and the bouncing of a pavement stone off Mutt's noodle would furnish many of the sensations.

Real Plot There.

Mr. Fisher, however, knew better than I did how Mutt and Jeff ought to go. The rough stuff is all right in cartoons, but on the stage it goes only in burlesque houses and the kippy audiences demand something more high toned.

Therefore, the curtain landed me right in the middle of a plot, an extremely able bodied, aggressive, not-to-be-squelched-by-music sort of plot that stuck out all over and could not be mistaken for anything else.

It began at the Saratoga race track, continued on an ocean liner and wound up in South America in the middle of a revolution. There was the Spanish general, his beautiful daughter, the young American soldier of fortune, the Chicago pork packer villain and his villainess of a daughter. There were numerous persons who fired guns and revolvers.

Bud Fisher wrote the plot and he wrote a good one while he was about it. "Give the audience a chance to get excited once in a while," says Bud. "Don't make them laugh all the time, they'll choke."

Speaking of audiences, there was one. It occupied every available seat, jammed all the boxes and packed ten deep in the standing room space. It came to see Mutt and Jeff and it enjoyed every moment of the play. It was a very noisy, hilarious, bad mannered audience, for perfect strangers clapped one another on the back without an introduction and sometimes laughed so loud it couldn't hear the plot. This annoyed Mr. Fisher, who sat in the back of Box D, and leaned over every now and then to remark, "Some house there. Did you see the standing room only sign?"

Mutt and Jeff arrived early and stayed late.

Roger Gray was Mutt and Shorty DeWitt was Jeff, and they were certainly a wonderful team. They were the real characters out of the sporting page of the AMERICAN. Gray talked as we imagine Mutt would talk. Jeff's voice was a little too shrill, but whoever heard a midget bass?

They were every bit as funny as the pictures and their actions were funnier still.

Spirits for Rheumatism

The use of spirits in the treatment of rheumatism has proved an innovation among the medical profession. When mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly it is said to be an almost infallible cure for rheumatism and backache. Here is the formula: "From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime." Results come immediately. If your druggist does not have Toris compound in stock he will get it in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take some patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris compound in the original one ounce sealed yellow package.

TECH PUTS CASE TO CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge must decide whether it prefers to close Amherst street or have the proposed $2,000,000 Technology buildings erected in some other city, according to a declaration of President Richard C. Maclaurin, before the Cambridge City Council at a hearing on a petition for the closing of that thoroughfare.

"It should be clearly understood that the Institute of Technology can buy all the land it may want in Cambridge without approaching the City Council," said President Maclaurin. "It may buy such land and use it for any purpose that falls within the scope of its charter, but if it is to use this land as the site for its future buildings, then the closing of Amherst street and the transfer of all rights therein to the institute are absolutely essential.

"It must be clearly understood that the institute cannot consider this proposition as a site for its buildings, whatever other use it may be put to, if Amherst street is to remain open. And perhaps I ought to add that if the institute does acquire satisfactory title to all the property that has been referred to, including Amherst street, it will proceed at once to build there in a manner worthy of the greatest technical institution in the world.

"Speaking to an intelligent audience, I should put first as an advantage of inestimable value the mere presence of such an institution in your midst. You have an opportunity of securing not an unknown and untried school, but admittedly the greatest thing of its kind in existence, and surely it must mean much for the citizens of Cambridge to be better placed in the matter of technical education than any other city in the world.

"The school is one that gives boys training as an entrance to many practical professions and opens its doors to rich and poor alike. It may be interesting to you to know that of the Massachusetts students at present at the institute, one-third of the whole are sons of wage-earners. Such a school is for some poor boys the only avenue to real success in life, and it gives them an opportunity not only of bettering themselves but of contributing materially to the future wealth of the city and of the State.

"Apart from these advantages, unquestionably great but hard to estimate in dollars and cents, the presence of the institute in Cambridge would enable the latter to benefit directly by the large sums of money spent by the institute and its students. It is estimated that, at a minimum figuring, at least a million and a half dollars a year are spent in this way, and a large part of this would inevitably be added to the wealth of the city.

This takes no account of the very large sums of money to be spent in the future on the buildings of the institute. We propose within the next few years to spend at least two million dollars in buildings, and if this takes place in Cambridge that city cannot fail to profit largely by the expenditure.

FLOOD VICTIMS THANK HEARST

COSTELLO, Pa., Nov. 15.—The Austin-Costello Flood Sufferers' Association, comprising nearly 100 persons who lost relatives and property in the Austin dam disaster of September 30, last night adopted a strong resolution of thanks and gratitude to William Randolph Hearst.

Accompanying a copy of the resolution, which was telegraphed to Mr. Hearst to-day, was the following telegram, sent by Attorneys Luther B. Seibert and Frank E. Cummings, representing the survivors:

"We have been directed by our clients to forward to you the following resolutions; also we personally desire to thank you for your assistance so generously offered our clients."

The resolution, forwarded by Secretary Martin Gorman reads as follows:

"Whereas, The Honorable William R. Hearst of New York has seen fit to render substantial and valuable services to us in our efforts to obtain justice and redress for the destruction of life and property by the breaking of the Bayless Pulp and Paper Company's dam at Austin, Pa., on September 30, 1911, when millions of dollars worth of property was destroyed and more than four score lives were sacrificed; and

Whereas, The New York American and Evening Journal alone among the great newspapers have tirelessly supported our interests and fearlessly promoted our cause in demanding that justice be done; therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that sincere thanks be extended to the Honorable William R. Hearst and those associated with him for services and assistance so rendered, and we hereby record this expression of our heartfelt gratitude for the same, and direct that this resolution be spread upon our minutes and a copy thereof be forwarded to the Honorable William R. Hearst.

LEAPS FROM WINDOWS WITH CLOTHES AFIRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—An explosion that shook the building at No. 263 Tenth street, sent tenants fleeing to the street just in time to see the forms of three little boys enveloped in flames appear on the fire escapes. Disregarding cries of "Don't jump," the three lads leaped over the fire escape simultaneously to the stone flagging below. The policeman smothered the flames with his coat, but the boys were burned and may not recover. The parents of the children, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dematrie, in order to keep them in school, worked in a cigarette factory. Peter, the oldest, was warming over some beef stew on an oil stove, when an explosion covered them with flames and they took to the windows.

DISFIGURING ECZEMA CURED IN 2 WEEKS

Blisters Broke and Formed Scabs. Nose Covered with Them. Very Itchy. Used Cuticura Remedies. Now Hasn't a Single Mark

"My nephew first showed signs of eczema on the middle finger, and it came out like a blister. His mother thought he had gotten a burn in some way unknown to her, and she treated it as such. He must have rubbed his face with that hand, as it then broke out on his nose the same way. When the blisters broke, they shrivelled up and formed scabs. His nose was covered with scabs, and it was very itchy. He was badly disfigured with unsightly scabs. At first, his nose was sore, and it gradually became worse so his mother took him to the doctor. He gave her some preparation, and told her to rub the scabs off every day, and anoint the affected part with the medicine he gave her.

"The man must have been insane, as that was extreme torture to the child who was only two years old at the time, and that was two years ago. Well, we decided that that treatment would have to end. I suggested Cuticura Ointment and they bought it and put it on freely every day for two weeks. He had the eczema for four weeks altogether, but was getting gradually worse until they used the Cuticura Remedies, and he was cured in two weeks. He most certainly would have been scarred with the other treatment, but now he hasn't a single mark. Cuticura Remedies cured him in two weeks, and now we always keep them in the house." (Signed) Miss Ida Slavin, 233 South Fifth St., Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 4, 1911.

For more than a generation the Cuticura Remedies have afforded the most economical treatment for affections of the skin and scalp of infants, children and adults. A cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and a box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient. Although sold throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin will be sent free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 13A, Boston.

STALLO GIRLS FIGHTING TAX

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Startling revelations in respect to the fortunes of the Misses Laura and Helena Stallo are expected to-morrow at the hearing before Deputy State Comptroller Harburger, on the question of the inheritance tax to be paid on the estate which the young girls inherited from their grandfather, Alexander McDonald, Standard Oil magnate.

The Stallo sisters have been much in the limelight ever since Miss Helena broke her engagement to young Nils Florman, son of a Danish nobleman, whose mother became a masseuse because of adverse fortunes of the family.

It is said subpoenas have been issued for General Brayton Ives, president of the Metropolitan Trust Company, and Beverly Chew, vice-president, and that they will testify to-morrow.

According to the accounting, filed by the administrator of the estate, the $50,000,000 which it was reported at the time of his death Mr. McDonald had left, has virtually vanished, and the "heiresses" are confronted with a deficit of about $80,000.

The Misses Stallo still have the $200,000 or so which each inherited from the estate of their grandmother, Mrs. McDonald, but the shrinkage in their grandfather's estate may mean, it is said, a considerable entrenchment from the manner of living to which they have been accustomed.

The virtual disappearance of the McDonald millions is due to the vast number of claims that were unheard of at the time of Mr. McDonald's death, but which since have poured in from all quarters.

IT IS SIMPLY MARVELOUS

The Good Derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Patient Gained Thirty-eight Pounds in Less Than Two Months.

Business Men in Town Know About the Case.

BARRE FORGE, Pa.—"There is no other medicine in the world that I know so much about, and am so glad to recommend, as Hood's Sarsaparilla. The good it has been to me is simply marvelous, I suppose I was one of the greatest sufferers from indigestion and liver troubles. In eight months I lost 62 pounds, and my strength ran down so that I was scarcely able to walk about the house. I was misery to myself and all about me. I looked terrible, and my friends thought I could only live a short time. Indeed, I made up my mind to this myself.

"I tried some of our best physicians here and in Huntingdon, but with no avail, until one of the doctors prescribed Hood's Sarsaparilla. I made up my mind to give it a fair trial. I began to take it the 1st of January, and in six days I knew it was doing me good, for I began to relish food, and from that time on the gain was more rapid. I increased in weight, gaining 38 pounds in less than two months. That tired feeling went away, and I feel almost as well as I ever did in my life. I can eat well, sleep well, and in fact feel that I am a new man.

"Neighbors have talked wonderingly about the change in my condition, and they know it was due to Hood's Sarsaparilla. Several of the business men of this town, postmaster and other neighbors and friends, who know about my case will certify to the facts I have stated." Harrison Houp.

Hood's Sarsaparilla effects its wonderful cures, not simply because it contains sarsaparilla, but because it combines the utmost remedial values of more than twenty different ingredients. There is no real substitute. Get Hood's Sarsaparilla today in the usual liquid form, or in the chocolated tablets called Sarsatabs.

JUROR RESUMES PALMER STORY

William A. Dummery, a member of the Middlesex county grand jury in July of this year, was again placed on the stand to-day, when the case of Jackson Palmer, the Lowell attorney, who claims he was not legally indicted for perjury by that body, was resumed before Justice McLoughlin in the Superior Court at East Cambridge.

Dummery testified that he sat directly behind Foreman Gokey of the Grand Jury during the sitting and heard Palmer testify in relation to the Lowell graft case. He declared he heard Palmer tell of the ride to Boston on which he said he saw the two daughter of former Keeper Shaw of the Lowell jail offer tickets to the conductor which were afterward charged to the account of the county.

The witness testified that he heard Palmer describe to the grand jury his talk with the ticket agent of the Boston & Maine railroad in Lowell relative to the tickets presented by the Shaw girls.

Mr. Dummery was questioned by District Attorney Higgins.

Q.—Do you remember anything being said in the Grand Jury about an indictment to be brought against Jackson Palmer? A.—I cannot say for sure.

Q.—Was there an indictment brought? A.—I do not remember any.

Q.—What business was there performed by the Grand Jury on the 18th of July, 1911, besides the regular routine that you remember? A.—We formed a Grand Jury association.

Q.—Anything else? A.—We elected you an honorary member.

Q.—I appreciate the honor. Was there any other business? A.—We discussed a testimonial to be given to a friend.

Q.—Was there any other business? A.—We discussed a trip to Nantasket.

Attorney Sherman Whipple—This seems to have been a sort of a flowery day for the grand jury. (Laughter.)

District Attorney Higgins then showed the witness a copy of the petition to the court in which Palmer declared that no indictment had been returned against Palmer for perjury.

URGE CARE IN DRIVING TRUCKS

By J. C. KERRISON.

One of the greatest menaces to the advancement of motor truck interests is the inexperienced and careless operators, who with entire disregard for the eternal fitness of things, sends his truck along the city street or the country road at an unreasonable rate of speed. What might otherwise be a most serviceable and efficient truck is oftentimes turned into a merely passable vehicle by the abuse of the operator, whose sole idea of efficiency is speed and who drives a truck carrying heavy loads at from eighteen to twenty-five miles an hour, when they should not be sent, at the most, at a speed over twelve miles.

Frequent illustrations of this are daily seen and it is surprising that the houses who are paying the price of this abuse do not put a stop to it. The truck that is driven at a pace in keeping with its weight and load will last twice as long as the same truck that is driven at a much higher rate of speed. The proper driving of a truck means the saving of great sums of money to the firm utilizing the same, and it means it not only in mechanical excellency and efficiency, but in the cost of upkeep, of which the matter of tires is by no means the least important.

Solid tire manufacturers have endeavored to determine with some degree of exactness what should be the average life of a tire, but in view of the manner in which trucks are being operated this is indeed most difficult. Some drivers will get seven and eight thousand miles out of a set of solids, while others will not get 2,000.

The writer has in mind one instance where a set of solids has been in use less than two months and they have now to be renewed. This, however, is no fault of the tire manufacturer, but rather from the method of operating the truck, the driver of which, as indicated by the tires, has a particular fondness for the car-track—all four tires showing results of constant driving on the iron rail, which driving raises ructions with the tires.

Another thing is the constant and sudden jamming on of the brakes, the running over of cross-walks at a high rate of speed, when carrying a load is likewise injurious to the life of a motor truck tire, and it is only a question of a short time when those who own motor trucks will take it upon themselves to make it a point to see how those trucks are handled at a time when the driver imagines himself free from critical observation.

J. H. MacAlman announces that a deal was closed in Cleveland last week whereby The F. B. Stearns Company, who are confining their product solely to cars equipped with the "Silent Knight" type engine, secured control of the Royal Tourist Motor Car Company's factory. The Royal factory is one of the most complete plants of its kind in the country. Mr. MacAlman says:

"Now that the Stearns people have assumed control, and installed many of their departments, it appears that the Royal shops will be busy from one year's end to another. A great many more men are being employed by the Stearns people, and shipments are being made faster than ever before. The Stearns Company has moved its body building, upholstering, painting, road testing, final assembly and finished test departments to the Royal plant, thus giving much more room in the main factory on Euclid avenue. The departments installed in the Royal factory are keeping practically the entire plant busy, all the work being done, of course, by Stearns employes."

WU TING FANG A MARKED MAN

SHANGHAI, Nov. 15.—Dr. Wu Ting Fang, former Chinese minister to the United States and foreign minister in the reorganized cabinet, has been warned that he is a marked man and that spies in the pay of the Manchu court are seeking his life. With the philosophy which marks his utterances and actions, Dr. Wu replied to his informant that he felt no fear and that if he was to die in the interests of liberty he would die happily.

Fighting between rebels and imperialists has been resumed at Hankow, according to reports received here to-day, and the revolutionary army is steadily gaining, the imperial troops suffering great loss of life.

TOKIO, Nov. 15.—Excitement was caused throughout official circles in the Japanese capital to-day by reports that the United States is preparing to pour an army of 10,000 men into China. Whether the United States communicated with other powers before considering this important step, or whether it will be executed at all, are not known here. Japan's chief grievance is that the United States is not vitally interested. On the other hand Japan and Russia are keenly alive to the tidal wave of unrest which might sweep the entire Orient in the event that a republic is established in China.

CANTON, Nov. 15.—Outlaws have taken possession of Tsing Kiang, looting all the banks and government buildings and getting $10,000,000 in booty.

The brigands plundered the dwellings of the wealthy and killed all who resisted. Hundreds of rebel and imperialist soldiers are forming robber bands.

PEKIN, Nov. 14.—Following his private audience with Prince Chun, the regent, and the Dowager Empress in the Imperial Palace in the Forbidden City, Yuan Shi-Kai, who is trying to save the Manchu dynasty and yet bring about a lasting peace through the empire, to-day held a conference with the Young China leaders in the National Assembly.

General Yuan has as yet, given no counsel to the members of the government. He said he would have to consult with members of the National Assembly first. If the Young China element is determined to oust the Manchus from China, Yuan may advise the court to abdicate without protest.

Dr. Wu Ting Fang, former minister to the United States and Foreign Minister in the regenerated Chinese Cabinet, has at last openly declared himself with the radical element. In a telegram from Shanghai he urges the Prince regent to leave the capital and resign his post.

Fighting is reported to have been started at Tien Tsin, where heavy detachments of foreign troops are held.

The same dispatch stated that an attempt had been made to assassinate Chang Shao Tseng, former head of the Army League and commander of the Lanchow army, by agents alleged to be in the pay of Yuan Shi-Kai.

THOUSANDS ON CARS DELAYED

Thousands of trolley-using commuters were delayed an hour or more coming in to Boston from the north during the rush hours from 6.30 to 8:30 to-day by the power being crippled on the Chelsea division of the Bay State Street Railway Company.

Bay State cars, also Elevated cars running on Bay State tracks, moved so slowly under the weak power that passengers could walk faster than the cars traveled. Where passengers were within decent distance of their destination they did walk.

The trouble was caused by three trolley poles on Front street, Chelsea, being broken down by the wind and weight of wires. They carried down all supply wires to the Front street power house except one. This remaining wire, connected with a small dynamo, had to bear the brunt of the entire service of Chelsea division.

The result was that there was power to move about one car in ten. This trouble affected cars coming in from Lynn, Salem, Saugus, Revere, Everett, Chelsea and Melrose on the Chelsea division of the Bay State, also Malden and Everett lines of the Elevated using the Bay State tracks.

Where cars were running on two-minute time, for instance, groups of five or six cars would be held up in a bunch. Inspectors bustled out with instructions to motormen to send along one car at a time as the power was barely enough for all cars to move on "one-notch" speed, as the motormen express it.

One car would be sent along for a mile. Then another car would travel, then another, and so on. It was a choice between this relay system at good speed or a crawl for all the cars. Cars stalled in the outlying districts had to take their chances and grab a bit of progress when a little power was vouchsafed them.

Passengers in a hurry to get to shops, stores and offices fumed and fretted.

Meanwhile repair crews worked feverishly till, at 8:30, the fallen supply wires were re-connected and a full head of power was given.

AIKEN APPROVES COURT CHANGE

Chief Justice Aiken of the Superior Court has approved of a draft of new rules designed to eliminate a large number of objectionable features in the trial of civil cases in the district, police and municipal courts of the entire State outside the Municipal Court of Boston. They will take effect January 1.

Under the new rules three days are given a defendant to file his appearance and answer after the Saturday the original writ is returnable. An automatic default is recorded against him if he fails to answer in the time specified. A six-day written notice must be given the opposite party to place a case on the trial list. Copies of this notice and a request that the case be put upon the list also, must be filed with the clerk. Cases not ready for trial when called cannot be filed again within four weeks, and the several courts are authorized to appoint trial days for hearing civil cases.

On the first trial day in 1912 the courts may call all cases on their dockets and dismiss those in which no action has been taken for two years.

WELSH THREATENS TO CALL OFF BOUT WITH AD WOLGAST

Secrets of Drop Kicking and Punting and Methods Used by Big Teams Explained by Henry H. Hobbs

Boston American Football Expert Describes Fine Plays of This Department.

By HENRY H. HOBBS.

(Copyright by the Boston American, 1911. All rights reserved.)

Under the new rules the kicking game has entered into the play with much more importance than formerly, when a team could be reasonably sure of carrying the ball the length of the field in strong rushes, gaining five yards in three downs until a touchdown was finally scored.

Although the defence has been weakened to meet the present open game, when the opponents have reached a distance twenty-five yards from the goal this defence is justified in closing in, which presents a much harder proposition through which to gain than was further away from the goal line.

As a result of this, a premium has been placed upon reliable, successful drop kickers and those who are able to successfully accomplish the feat of kicking goals from placement in scrimmage.

In more than the majority of cases in championship games within the last few years when the opponents have been strong defensively, it has been a successful goal from the field which has secured a hard-earned victory.

How Yale Beat Harvard.

A successful eleven in many cases has repeatedly punted, forcing the play with in the opponents' territory and being on the alert constantly for a fumble which, if secured, gives them the ball within easy striking distance of the goal.

It has then been the case that strong line rushes, which have been concealed until this time, make a strong bid to cover the remaining few yards for a touchdown.

This was noticably the case when the Yale championship eleven defeated Harvard in the Stadium in 1909. Well knowing that the Harvard defence was unusually strong, it was decided to use their great punter, Coy, in the dual role of punter and drop-kicker.

When Yale secured the ball it was frequently punted on first or second down, keeping the ball near the Harvard goal line, and every member of the eleven watching out for a loose ball.

As a result of this, Yale was within striking distance of Harvard's goal six times in that game. Upon each occasion, Coy was successful in his drop-kicks which secured six points, a comfortable margin to secure victory.

On the other hand, through Harvard's poor judgment in opening up its offensive game under the shadow of the goal posts, although gaining throughout the game three yards to Yale's one, the offence had been solved by the Yale linemen when the play reached the middle of the field, and they were not once within sure striking distance of Yale's goal line.

How to Punt Correctly.

A team out for championship laurels must possess a punter who can secure both height and distance, and above all things be reliable and consistent.

The punter takes his position about five yards back of centre and receives the ball of this point from which the kick is made. The ball is dropped so that its long axis is parallel with the sidelines and is kicked with the instep of the foot, or as many teaches express it, the "full" of the foot.

In order to secure additional momentum to the drive of the leg, the punter takes usually one long step with his right foot—providing that is the one with which he kicks—and a slight hop step with his left before he kicks the ball.

His body is bent forward, and at the time his foot kicks the ball his body is thrown backward and arms to the side or overhead. This movement secures a greater drive in following the kick through, and adds many yards to the flight of the ball.

There are two distinct kicks made by the punter. One is the long high spiral which gives the linemen plenty of time to cover the ball. Another kick is the low, revolving flight which is desired to hit the ground before the opponent's backfield can reach it.

If this is successful the ball usually rolls rapidly along the ground and the uncertainty in bounce gives the backfield of the opponents in recovering the ball, but also gives enough time that it may even be recovered by the kicker's side.

The Kick of Last Resort.

This last is the one used when making an onside kick. At best this is a very dangerous play, and statistics have shown that it is successful against a good team very seldom. The new rules state that the ball must have travelled at least twenty yards into the opponents' territory before it can be recovered by the kicker's side.

As a result of this legislation, a wide-awake defence can recover this onside kick with reasonable safety. Most coaches drill their team to use this play as the last resort when within the opponent's territory after all other plays have failed to gain, or a greater distance must be secured to earn first down.

Whether the kicker is making an onside, drop or placement kick, much responsibility rests upon the centre passer. If the pass is fast and accurate the kicker can quickly get his kick away, consequently giving the opponents less opportunity to block the ball.

Many great punters have secured victory through their ability to gain from five to fifteen yards on an exchange of kicks, taking the work of the two teams in covering the kick to be of the same standard.

When the kicker has a considerable wind at his back he should endeavor to get unusual height, which will allow the wind to carry the ball further down the field. Conversely, when the kick is made against the wind it should be low.

The Secret of Drop Kicking.

The drop kick is made by dropping the ball upon the ground in such a manner that it will arise slightly in the direction of the kicker's foot, whose toe delivers the force which sends the ball upon its flight.

Several drop kickers, but by far the minority, have kicked drop kicks in much the same fashion as a punt with the "full" of the foot. Coy of Yale was one of this type.

The goal from touchdown and also the placement kick, whether it be on a fair catch or from scrimmage, is made in much the same manner. The ball is held by another player, with its long axis at right angles with the ground.

The kicker should take a long, easy swing with his leg, increasing the speed until it has reached a maximum at the time of contact. One of the secrets in successful goal-kicking is not to kick at the ball, that is, "jab" at it, but by taking a long swing, the leg being perfectly straight except for just the beginning, keeping the eye always on the ball and following the swing through, even after the ball has been kicked and is on its flight.

The attitude of this is exactly the same as when driving a golf ball from the tee. Such a procedure will not only give greater distance, but a well-satisfied accuracy as well.

The Old Rule Handicap.

Under the old rules, if the ball from the kickoff had been kicked over the goal line of the opponents, it was brought out by them and kicked from some point between the twenty 25-yard line. This would usually give the team having the kickoff the ball at about midfield. It is obvious that the advantage to the ball being kicked over the goal line was with the kicker's side.

Now, however, if the ball is kicked over the goal line it can be brought out to the 25-yard line and then put in play either by scrimmage or a kick.

The object nowdays in making the kickoff is to secure unusual height and getting the distance so that it will land just this side of the goal.

Then the man making the catch must run the ball back and he should be stopped in most cases on about the 15-yard line. Thus, an advantage of about 10 yards has been gained by not making the ball over the line.

HOBBS EXPLAINS THE KICKING GAME

To-day's article by Henry H. Hobbs, the AMERICAN'S gridiron expert, is the tenth of a series by him on "How to Play Football." In this chapter Mr. Hobbs fully explains how to become a great punter, describing each kick and its advantages in a game.

Every lover of the Fall sport should read this article. It is a lesson for every one who takes part in the game. If you play on a high school eleven, amateur team, or even a college team, you should read every word of this article.

Mr. Hobbs is a man that knows the game of football. He has played the game at Andover, Dartmouth and Yale, and while playing the game was picked by experts for a place on the All-American team. If you do not read to-day's article you are missing something that you should know.

Saturday's game at the Stadium between Harvard and Dartmouth will be reviewed by Mr. Hobbs. He will write the game from an expert's point of view for the Sunday AMERICAN. Don't fail to read the most complete account, illustrated with pictures, in the sporting pages of Sunday's AMERICAN.

REAY HOT TO RACE WILKIE

Having purchased the champion pacer of all driving clubs in New England, Reliance 2:11¼, the property of the Lynn Driving Club, I wish to have announced in the Boston AMERICAN that I am prepared to match Wilkie, champion pacer of the Charles River speedway, for the title of the speedway, or of New England, and will take on Lester Dent and Cafeene, if the owners of the last two want any of my game. This with anybody to drive.

Thus declared J. O. Reay between heats at the matinee of the Metropolitan Driving Club at Charles River speedway. This certainly means a new fox in the field. Reliance established his title of New England champion by winning over all pacers during the great interclub series at Combination Park, Medford, when he stepped the mile around in 1:59½, and one of the fastest time ever made in an amateur race over a half-mile track.

The best effort he defeated Chief Wilkie at Charles River speedway to sleigh, gaining the honor of champion of the course to sleigh.

Mr. Reay has entered Reliance to start in the matinee of the Dorchester Driving Club at Franklin Field speedway, being matched against Charley King and Roy de Diablo. He entry has been given the speedway committee of the Metropolitan Driving Club for the next matinee at Charles River speedway, which comes next Tuesday, and it is the hope of members and horsemen in general that the committee will place Mr. Wilkie and Reliance in the same class.

W. J. McDonald is not the sort of man wanting empty honors, so he is likely as anything as Mr. Reay's entry will soon be pitted against the new acquisition of the entry owner of the stable. It will, too, mean a glorious ending to the Fall series of matinees at Charles River speedway.

EAST BOSTON BOY ANDOVER CAPTAIN

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 15.—With the Phillips Andover Academy football team, was elected captain of the team for next season, at a meeting of the seniors men who participated in Andover's 23 to 5 victory over Exeter. He is twenty-three years old, weighs 160 pounds and is six feet one inch tall. He will go to Yale.

BOSTON CUE ARTIST WINS AT BROOKLYN

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—In a game played in Brooklyn in the Three-cushion National Amateur Billiards League, Charles Warren of Boston defeated John Loring, Jr., Brooklyn, 50 to 31, in 113 innings. Warren made ten runs of four and one of five, running out on the latter. Hoang made two runs of three.

DISBANDED CLUB MUST PAY MEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The National Baseball Commission has just handed down a ruling which should prove a protection to the players of minor league clubs forced to disband with a salary list unsettled. Hereafter said territory will not be protected and the league to which the club belonged will not be permitted to substitute any other city into its circuit until the salary obligations have been made up to the players.

As a further protection to minor league clubs, the National Commission has authorized Secretary Farrell of the National Association to hold the amounts of draft or purchase money turned over for any of these players to which the club in default is entitled in case of a balance after the settlement of the salary due to the drafted or purchased players and his former teammates. In case of a balance after the settlement, the club from which the players is purchased or drafted is to benefit.

The case of Dan Dugey, thrown called forth the ruling, Charleston, of the South Atlantic League, disbanded, owing its athlete $250. He finally signed with Pittsburg, but the understanding that the Pirates should pay him all the back salary the Dugey had specified. Mr. Farrell has ordered Secretary Farrell to distribute among the other Charleston players the balance of the usual major league draft price on a claim by organization. Charleston, disbanded from the O. and F. League, has been ordered to pay the back salary of $125 to Player W. P. Frank. Until this obligation is met the city will not be tolerated in organized ball. Neither will the O. and F. League be allowed to add to its circuit until this debt is paid.

TONY ROSS WINS IN BOUT WITH MORRIS

PITTSBURG, Nov. 15.—Tony Ross, the heavyweight Italian from Newcastle, defeated Andy Morris, the New England aspirant for white hope' honors, in a six-round contest. Morris was outclassed from the opening of the first round until the close of the fifth, receiving punishment which would have knocked out a weaker man.

Ross should have won in four rounds, but his lack of generalship and failure to take advantage of Morris' weakness made the his adversary to stay the limit. In the second round Morris came back strong, and it was the opinion of the spectators that had the contest gone to ten or fifteen rounds he would have gained the decision. The distance was just a trifle too short for him.

GIANTS LEAVE FOR CUBAN GAMES TO-DAY

GREEN TEAM IN FINE CONDITION

ANDOVER, Nov. 15—Robert N. Jones of Dartmouth scoring machine running smoothly and with nearly every man in tip top condition, Coach Cavanaugh is taking no chances with eleventh hour injuries. Just now it is his idea to give the big Green huskies just enough of the good, sound, old-fashioned grind to make them puff a little and get them dirty enough to realize that they are still playing the game of old game.

To-day the squad will spend the afternoon scrimmaging with tackles and signal practice. The first and second teams will have regulation scrimmage work in order to try out new plays, for Coach Frank Cavanaugh did not show his whole hand in Dartmouth Saturday. This he will do well in manipulating the rest of his stock, and Harvard may be sure that no quarry a coach as he still has a couple of aces up his sleeve.

Bennett, the big guard, has not resumed his position when Beer now stands, but he is coming on fast and should be in togs to-day. Bobby Hogarth, who nearly lifted himself himself at Princeton, still has his injured arm in a sling. Morey's cut has not proved to be only a bumped knee, and he will be going full till to-day.

Barends is one of the most valuable men on the team, and he will probably be seen at some stage of the Harvard game, at either tackle or halfback. At present the lineup bids fair to be the same it was on Saturday, with the exception of Parsons, who will probably give way to Bennett or Beer.

Squad in Hard Drill.

The squad had a hard scrimmage for one hour yesterday, Coach Cavanaugh's purpose evidently being to try out several new formations. The field was wet and slippery, but despite this the men were out going at top speed.

Llewellyn was at quarter, and his work was of the usual high-class order. Rhoades as at Full, and Morey had sufficiently recovered from his blow he received in the Princeton game to be able to resume his position at left half.

Dudley was in the other halfback position, and he will be at practice to-day. The position at right guard, as Coach Cavanaugh has been trying to take any more chances with this valuable man on the eve of the big game, has been filled at all his place, with Whitmore still at the other guard position.

After the strong game he put up in the Princeton game, Engleburn is sure to start the Harvard game. Before Saturday the captain of last year's Dartmouth team was causing some anxiety to the coaches, but he has been in a big game before and his ability was largely problematic.

Engleburn Strong Player.

The great men from the Pacific Coast showed that they could be equaled, if not excelled, in both offensive and defensive playing, and the coaches no longer fear the possibility of having a Dartmouth team to run up against for the Harvard left at Cambridge.

Block was at the other tackle position, and Coach Cavanaugh is giving him every opportunity to take any more chances with this valuable man on the eve of the big game. He was playing at all his place, with Whitmore still at the other guard position.

THREE-TEAM TIE IN CITY LEAGUE

Unless the rollers on the Elite, Carruth and Boylston teams of the City League do some exceptionally good bowling in this evening's match, the three-cornered tie, which now features this league, will be broken.

The Carruth aggregation should find it easy picking with the Hayward quintet as the latter's alleys. The Elite teams will run up against a tough proposition in the Adams Square team, while the Boylston and Chauncy team rollers clash at the Boylston alleys. The other match will bring together the McCarthys and Murray & Irwin.

The match between the Elites and Adams Squares is attracting a lot of attention among the bowling "hogs" and to-night's match is bound to bring together some good sphere work.

The chances of the Boylston team may be greatly weakened by the loss of Bill Galiway and a possible lost of John Christopher, in the last meeting with the Chauncy aggregation the latter team copped three out of the four points.

Other league matches are scheduled in the Newton League to-night. The Maugus and Hunnewell matches is bound to be a bummer. The Newtowne rollers will tackle the Riverdale, while the North Gate will try the mettle of the Allston Golf Club. Two matches are scheduled for the Mystic Valley A. O. U. W., Franklin Lodge, City A. O. U. W., Stone & Webster and the Laundry Leagues.

TUFTS SOPHS DEFY FOOTBALL BOARD

Tufts freshmen and sophomores meet to-day on Tufts' oval in the annual interclass football game. The freshmen have practiced hard and the sophomore chances for victory. Five of their very best players, including Captain Ryan, are on the sick list, however, were declared ineligible. There is no question but that the best team will win, the sophomore coach, Instructor Hi-hard Sullivan, and the freshman coach, Ryan, victory board. The sophomores say that they will play the men who were declared ineligible or there will be no game.

A mass meeting was held last night in which more than one hundred men were present and practiced. Another one will be held to-night and the coaches will address the students.

YALE-PRINCETON OFFICIALS CHOSEN

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 15.—Almost on the eve of their annual game Yale and Princeton have finally selected officials. The officials will be as follows: Referee, Langford, Trinity; umpire, Williams, University of Pennsylvania; field judge, Snow, Michigan, and head linesman, Costello, Cornell. The players declined to take any part in the choice of officials, though all of Yale's and Princeton's All Eleven have played for that organization, even the set picked last year by Walter Camp. All except the umpire were agreed upon three weeks ago, but Walter Williams has since an official in some capacity occasionally. Langford is the official who acted for Princeton the goal that won the game from Dartmouth after it had been kicked by goal posts. It is supposed that Dave Fultz and Brown, both Yale players, will be umpire. Costello has been seen at Yale practice this Fall but has been playing

BROWN AND TECH IN LONG GRIND

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 15.—Brown and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology meet in a cross country run here to-day. This is the second season of cross followers of the team are confident that country running here at Brown, and the it will make a good showing. This is the first college cross country race that has ever been held here and it has been necessary to lay out a new course for the race.

Expensive cups were given to the men finishing in the first three places, while the winning team was presented with an expensive banner.

The race started at Andrews field and proceeded north on Ivy street to Summit and Brewster to Sarah streets, across fields to Rochambeau avenue, then north along Blackstone boulevard for half a mile, going around the edge of the Seekonk. The return of the long grind was by way of President avenue, Boylston, Montague, Hope, Ivy and Cypress streets to the field. The entire course is four and a half miles long.

GARRELLS AND HESTON RUSH TO MICHIGAN

ANN ARBOR, Nov. 15.—"Willie" Heston and John Garrels, two of the greatest football players who ever fought for Michigan, and Hal Weeks, a halfback of much ability, have responded to the call of the Michigan alumni, temporarily deserting their positions in Detroit and spending the afternoons and evenings at Ann Arbor helping Yost to whip his eleven into shape for next Saturday's game with Pennsylvania. Craig and McMillan, two crippled stars, are again in uniform. Craig is expected to be Michigan's offensive star against Pennsylvania, but it is still doubtful whether McMillan will be ready to play.

Storer Shifted From Centre To Tackle on Crimson Team

By TED PARKE.

Another big shift has been made in the line of the Harvard eleven in order to solve the puzzle of bolstering up the right side of the line, where Gardiner's inability to play tackle, because of his arm being broken, is causing much trouble to Coach Haughton. Storer, the regular centre this year has been put at right tackle, and sub to Storer, filled the snapper-back's Parmenter, the man who has been playing sub to Storer, filled the latter's position.

There isn't much more time to make another change, and for that matter this change comes pretty late in the day, and could not be tolerated were it not necessary to strengthen this side of the line.

This new lineup will probably stand through the Dartmouth game at least, and seems to be much better than the one which found Captain Fisher at tackle.

Fisher is too much needed at guard, and as Storer has been having a good deal of experience, like unto that which the tackle might have when playing on the defensive, he should fill in the hole very well.

Parmenter is a practically new man at centre, having played this position for the first time this season. His passing, however, is much more consistent than that of Storer, who has made some pretty bad blunders this Fall, particularly in snapping back to kickers. Whether the new man will show as great ability at centre as has Storer is a question of speculation.

Campbell has now fully recovered from the strain which has been keeping him out of the work for the past week or so, and will certainly get into the game Saturday, when his presence will be needed indeed.

Felton, another man fresh from the injured list, was also on the field in togs, but he did not take part in any of the work handed out to the men. His limit was to run a couple of laps about the field, and try a few punts, to keep himself familiar with this sort of thing, for the Crimson will depend upon him to do this work against Dartmouth and Yale.

Felton in Good Shape.

His spirals were long and high, and the form he displayed in his practice showed that he has lost none of his old-time ability in this line, and will be able to boot the ball in Saturday's game, pretty consistently for fifty yards.

Harvard has been suffering recently for want of a consistent kicker, and the return of Felton to the game will mean much to the playing of the team.

Frothingham, Milholland and Hollister also did a little kicking yesterday, theirs being of the drop variety. They need to keep in shape, for Harvard does not look forward to having a very easy time of it against Dartmouth, and it will be wise to have a few men ready who may, in an emergency, be sent to score from the thirty or thirty-five yard line.

But to come down to the pith of the story. The work on Soldiers Field yesterday was light, just as it has been since the Princeton game. The only work the men had was a half hour alleged scrimmage with the subs, the men as usual half running through the signals, but there was no tackling.

Following this there was a long bit of signal drill by the varsity, and this was the completion of the hard day's work in preparation for the hardest game which the varsity will play thus far this year, that with Dartmouth this Saturday.

How on earth Coach Haughton expects to have his team act like football players against Dartmouth, when all they have been doing for the past week or so, is to trot against the subs, is a puzzle to the writer, and also to many of the Harvard students, who have told the writer many Harvard students, who would like to see some real work given to the varsity.

Should Hold Scrimmages.

There is also another fact worth mentioning. Storer has just been shifted from centre to tackle. How can a man learn to play a position unless he is given some chance to get into a real live scrimmage where he will have some one banging at him all the time, and where he will have an opportunity to learn what it means to stop rushes directed at him?

Of course he may have learned to defend the centre position, but he is going to find it a very different proposition this holding down tackle. When the centre is playing defgensively he is really a secondary man. At tackle he has to size up plays more quickly, and to play a game quite different in fundamental principles from that of a centre.

Give them a chance to get hardened and know what a stiff fight means. Then when they meet fast teams like Dartmouth and Yale they won't go to pieces when they find out that they can't rush the ball just as far as they would like on each and every rush. Scrimmaging, and by that is meant real scrimmaging, teaches the quarter to think quickly and lay his plans without hesitation. It teaches strategy. Gardner, the man who is slated for quarter now on the Harvard eleven, is naturally nervous.

There is absolutely no way for him to overcome the nervousness but to let him fight every day. When he has been through enough scrimmages, at least the edge of this nervousness will have been worn off. It isn't fair to the team as a team, nor to the men as individuals.

Coach Larkin to Push Team.

WORCESTER, Nov. 15—Another secret work-out will be given the Holy Cross football squad for the big Tech game Saturday by Coach Tim Larkin on Fitton Field this afternoon, and according to the program the members of the Varsity eleven will be put through one continuous grind, including two fifteen minute period scrimmages with the second team. One section of the Purple line which will be given especial attention to by Coach Larkin is that of the tackling department and it is possible that several of the first string subs will be tried out in this branch to-day. In the scrimmages against the seconds yesterday the Varsity eleven made an excellent showing, scoring three touchdowns in quick time and breaking large holes in the former's line, the ends, backfield and rush line showing great improvement over their work of last Saturday in the Colby game. Gibson, the fullback, Joy, who played at quarter and Ostergren, one of the tackles who hails from Roxbury, put up a classy fight in the scrimmages yesterday and by clever playing practically helped the Varsity squad to carry the ball over for several scores.

Morse Joins Williams Coaches.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Nov. 15.—Practice on Weston Field was strictly secret yesterday. Work in line blocking and charging preceded a short drill in punting and passing. The gridiron was covered with straw and scrimmage was held on the outfield of the baseball diamond. The scrubs put up a strong game and scored on the varsity, while the latter was almost powerless to pierce the second team's defence. Newton went back to right guard on the varsity, replacing Garfield. Morse, captain of the 1908 eleven, was on hand to add to the strength of the alumni staff which is helping Fred Daly. Morse is one of the strongest centres that Williams has produced, and his work on the Harvard Law School team when it defeated the Crimson a week ago gives evidence of his ability at present.

Hobbs to Aid Amherst Team.

AMHERST, Nov. 15.—Henry H. Hobbs, the star of Yale's football team two years ago, who last year coached the Amherst team through a successful season, is expected here to-day to help Coach Savage whip the team into shape for the game with Williams next Saturday. Coach Savage is still using the men easily, as he does not want them to go stale in the final week of the season. Most of yesterday afternoon was given over to perfecting the men in the use of a new set of signals. Miles is working the stiffness out of his knee and should be in the best of shape, Saturday. Guetter is still lame, however, and may not round into shape, in which case Kimball will play tackle instead.

PRINCETON MEN WALK TO YALE

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 15.—Five Princeton men started to-day to walk to New Haven, hoping that the feat will bring victory for the Tiger football team in its clash with Yale. A Yale man walked from New Haven to Princeton last year and Yale won, so the five Tiger students hope to turn the tables this year.

The men, who are all prominent in Princeton athletics, are T. F. Clark, '12, of Philadelphia, last year's captain of the gym team; W. J. Logan, '13, of Brooklyn, a member of the junior class crew; F. R. Hall, '13, of Brookline, one of the varsity track men; J. Simons, '13, of New York, a member of the football squad, and R. F. Irwin, '12, of Philadelphia.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 15.—From now on the coaches of the Brown eleven will groom the team consistently for the meeting with the Carlisle Indians here on Thanksgiving Day, and the men will not be spared at any stage of the drill. "Dusty" Ashbaugh, who by all rights ought not to have been required to play through the Yale game with his injured leg, is limping badly and will have several days for a lay-off. Mitchell, who had been playing less than most of the rest of the men. Kratz, tackle, who was hard bit by the Elis as they charged against the Brunonian line, will also have a few days of recuperation allowed him.

He wasn't exactly hurt, but the big fellow withstood a pretty heavy battering and needs a few days for a lay off. Mitchell, who had been playing centre the most of the season, was worked in for Ashbaugh at right end yesterday and gave a good account of himself. He has been held as a sub centre man for the past week or two, after Donovan, the senior football player, fairly found his forte as a good pivot. Donovan will doubtless be retained at centre and perhaps Bohl will be held as his understudy.

Welsh Balks at Jack Welch As Referee in Title Bout

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 15.—That he will refuse to accept Jack Welch as referee, that "Cherokee" Tom Jones tampered with the articles of agreement after they had been signed and that the Thanksgiving Day battle for the world's lightweight championship may be called off was the startling statement made by Freddie Welsh to-day.

"After seeing the way Welch allowed Wolgast to 'rough-house' Owen Moran I consider that it would be suicide for me to stand for Jack as referee," Welch said. "Baron Long telegraphed me last night, advising me to call off the match rather than allow Welch to referee. This I will do."

Buck Crouse will have a little six-round argument with Leo Houck this evening at Pittsburg. Both of these mitt slingers are after the middleweight title and a win will mean a lot for either one. Of course not much can be decided in six rounds if the bout is tame but Crouse says that he will mix it at the beginning of the first round and then go right after a knockout. Houck also claims a victory and will register a K. O. if possible.

A great battle is on tap for New Bedford fans when Johnny Connolly, the Scotch lightweight champion, and Peter Sullivan hook up at the Whaling City to-night. Connolly has been in this country for about a year and has won a warm place in the hearts of New England followers of the squared circle by his clever work. Eddie Mack's mitt artist realized the importance of to-night's mill and is in perfect condition. The Scotch champion has been working out daily at the Armory A. A. He finished his training Tuesday when he boxed six fast rounds with Young Jasper. Sullivan has been doing a great deal of fighting in the middle West during the past few years and has made a good showing. The mill is sure to be witnessed by a record-breaking house of boxing enthusiasts.

Did you ever hear of Patsy Bannigan? Of course you haven't. In these days of twentieth century finance and progress one has not got time to bother following he career of a little slip of a banamweight. This is even more true when you have to keep an eye on your better half in order to keep her from attending woman—now let me see—I think it is sufferers meetings or something like that. But be it as it may, Patsy is billed in regular theatrical fashion to try conclusions with Johnny Coulon at Johnstown, Pa., this evening. In select pugilistic society Johnny is known as the bantamweight champion of the world, provided that Eddie Keevin and Billy Cox, managers of Jimmy Walsh and Al Delmont respectively, are not within shouting distance. Brother Ben, who now manages the dapper champion, says that he is willing to match his "meal ticket" against any legitimate bantamweight.

Danny Morgan has always been noted as being a real wise individual, or guy, as they say over in the hashhouse where I eat twice daily. But Danny appears to have thrown his usual cautious tactics to the wind when he agreed to let Knockout Brown meet "One Round" Hogan at New York next Friday night. Hogan and Brown have met once already, and on this previous setto the Californian mixer gave the blonde-headed Dutchman more than he bargained for. "Knockout" is now not such an idol over in Gotham as he was in days gone by. This is partly the result of his defeat at the hands of Matt Wells and also partly on account of his refusal to meet the leading lightweights in long bouts.

Amateur boxers are certainly getting plenty of opportunities to display their skill these days. The Bradford Boat Club of Cambridge is the latest athletic club to interest itself in promoting the mitt game among teh "simon pures." This club will hold an amateur boxing tournament at Cypress Hall, Cambridge, on December 1. There will be final classes run off, namely 105, 135, 145, 158 and heavyweight class. Entries for this show close with John Brassil, Bradford Boat Club, No. 36 Prospect street, Cambridge, on November 28.

Joe White of South Boston is confident of annexing the scalp of one Jimmy Quinlan of Lawrence when they clash at Lawrence to-morrow night in a twelve-round bout.

Quinlan is a big favorite with Lawrence fans as a result of his victory over Tommy Murphy of Lawrence in three rounds at Unity Cycle two weeks ago. Quinlan says that if the Peninsular mitt dispenser is to finish in front he will have to put up the best battle of his life. Cy Goodwin of this fair hamlet and Jack Hyle of Beverly will exchange greetings in the semi-final bout of eight rounds. Jim Crilley, the matchmaker of the club, has matched Zbyszkkt, who has just returned from Europe to meet Tony Caprine at the Cycle on Friday night.

Matty Baldwin left for Memphis by way of New York to-day. The little Charlestown "Bearcat" is slated to meet Joe Mandot, the Southern lightweight wonder, at the Phenix Athletic Club, Memphis, on next Wednesday.

Baldwin was accompanied by Alec McLean who is confident that Matty will more than uphold his own with the dapper New Orleans Frenchman. Matty has been going at a great clip lately and should make it interesting for Mandot over the eight-round route.

YALE COACHES DRIVING SQUAD

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 15.—Some rough-house football was ordered for Yale Field this afternoon. The coaches regard the issue now at stake getting the scoring machine in motion. To-day's drill was designed to be the supreme test of the power of the eleven.

After to-day practice will be almost nominal before the Princeton game Saturday. There will be little, if any scrimmaging on Thursday.

The coaches now regard the makeup of the team as settled and the eleven will face the Tiger on Saturday exactly as it met the Brown Bear except that Jesse Spalding will return to his old place at right halfback, replacing Freeman.

Harry Perry has just a chance of replacing Charley Paul at right tackle but the outlook is not brilliant.

Betting is now lively for the Princeton game and is strictly on even terms. Princeton's victories over Harvard and Dartmouth have flooded the Tiger coffers and much of the cold cash wagered and won by Princeton rooters in these two games has been sent here to be put up against Yale.

Dunn returned to his old stamping ground at fullback yesterday and pulled off the only long run of the afternoon. He scored on the play, covering forty yards after breaking through the freshman light line.

Avery's return to left end and that of Bomeisler to right probably establishes these two players who, without doubt, will be the final choice for end.

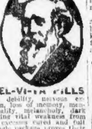

Spalding was in uniform, but his muscle bruise is still tender and he will be scrimmaging but little. He will be found at his old address, right halfback, in the Princeton game.

The coaches are trying to focus the attack instead of scattering it, and the Tigers are likely to find themselves faced with a whirlwind sequence of plays here Saturday.

Ex-Captain Tom Shevlin, the Napoleon of the Yale attack, was here for the first time since Friday, and "Pudge" Heffelfinger came from St. Paul, arriving in time for the practise. He will be here till the curtain is rung down next week Saturday night.

Other coaches included Sanford, Camp, Bloomer, Roraback, Holt, Olcott, Adee, Coy, Jones, Field, Brooks, Morris, Brides and Cochrane.

The Discovery of a Teamster

By DOROTHY DIX

NOT long ago I wrote a little article for this column in which I expressed the opinion that love and appreciation were the great and only solvents for all the domestic misery about us.

In a word, my contention was that it isn't the hardships of married life that men and women resent. It is the fact that husbands and wives do not appreciate the sacrifices that are made for them, and that is only love—love that expresses itself in words and deeds—that robs these sacrifices of their bitterness and makes them worth while.

It is always pleasant to have our theories confirmed by actual experience, and so I am going to quote a part of a letter that I have just received, bearing upon this article to which I have referred.

The letter is from a poor woman who works in a muslin underwear factory, where she runs a power machine for fifty long hours a week for the wage of eight dollars.

Married a Teamster

She fell in love with a splendid young fellow, a teamster, who gets ten dollars a week, and they got married. Having a lot of common sense the girl did not give up her place at the factory when she married, but continued to work, and the two of them are boarding in a comfortable place, and saving every cent possible of their combined earnings to start a little home, as they did not want to begin housekeeping overwhelmed with debt to the instalment furniture man. This woman, whose husband has been able to give her nothing but love, and who still has to slave over her sewing machine, writes me this:

"We have been married over a year now and we have never had a cross word, and I did not know that any one in this world could be so happy as I am.

"We have nothing that rich people have, but my husband does not go to saloons, or places of that sort, and he never goes out without me.

"He makes very little money, but he gives me every cent he gets.

"He can't give me fine clothes, but he loves me with a love that few men ever give a woman. Every day he tells me that he never had anything but me, and that I am the best thing that God ever gave him.

"Every night when we come home from our work he kisses my hands that have toiled so hard all day.

"Do you think that I mind working for a man like that? Do you think that it hurts me that he can't give me fine clothes when he gives me a love like that? No, a thousand times no. His love makes everything worth while."

This is a bona fide letter. In it the writer says that her husband was left an orphan when a little child, and that he never had any opportunity to get an education, or even learn a trade.

Perhaps he is ignorant in books, but he had the supreme wisdom to solve the great matrimonial problem that has stumped the wisest philosophers and sociologists when he kissed the work-hardened hands of his wife. That kiss made her willing to work them to the bone for him. And the same thing would have the same effect on any other living woman.

Let all the unhappily married follow the example of this couple, for it's love, and only love, that makes the domestic wheel go round without creaking.

HICTANER—By Jean de la Hire

The Man That Lived in the Water—One of the Strangest Stories Ever Written

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT.

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner.

WHEN she had heard the two doors close she fell to the floor sobbing violently.

The poor child was no longer upheld by her indignation and the nervous excitement which the sight of Severac had wrought in her.

She measured now the full extent of her misery.

Surely all flight from this subterranean prison was impossible, separated as it was from mankind by mountain and by sea. Neither Oxus nor Fulbert could discover Severac's retreat. Her Hictaner—her beloved Guy—would never find her again.

As she wept in bitter abandon, Moisette could see no deliverance but death. Then a more awful despair floded her being. She raised her armed hand to sink the knife into her heart, but her arm was suspended, and she sank gently to the floor.

"I am to have a companion," murmured the unfortunate.

"I am to have a servant. Perhaps they will take pity on me. They will save me."

Here was hope—the happy ray of hope which refreshes souls! Following upon the shadows of death, this ray of life filled Moisette's being with such emotion that the poor child fainted.

Who Had Carried Her?

When she awoke she was lying upon the bed in her room. In a flash she recalled everything. She remembered having fallen in the centre of the salon.

Who had carried her to her bed? It could only be Severac. She shuddered. But he had not harmed a hair of her head.

She promised herself fervently not to let herself be carried away by anger or emotion again, for she realized that her physical resources must not be so severely taxed.

"I must wait for the companion and servant he has promised me," she said. "That is my one hope."

Nothing could have been calmer or more uneventful than the four days following this eventful evening. She prepared her food carefully and forced herself to eat. She read, dreamed and barricaded herself at night in her room, the only entrance to which was the door leading into the salon which was provided with lock and bolt.

During those four days Severac did not appear. His absence began to make Moisette uneasy.

She wondered if his promise of a companion and a servant were only a cruel lie. But it was not!

On the morning of the fifth day she was in the salon. She heard the doors open. She rose quickly, first making sure that the knife was in her dress.

A beautiful young girl with a serious face and great, rather hard, black eyes, was following Severac into the orom.

"Mademoiselle," said Severac to Moisette, "here is Vera, my niece, who will be a companion and a friend."

The two young girls glared at each other. At Vera's cold hard gaze, Moisette felt all her hopes fall. In Severac's "niece," she sensed an enemy.

But Moisette bravely hid her disappointment and responded to Vera's scrutiny with a swift glance.

"M. Severac," she said, "under these circumstances, my companion must be either a prisoner or a guardian.

"Since Mademoiselle is your niece, and in consequence devoted to your interests and your plans, it will be very hard for me to think of her as a friend."

"Think of me as you like, Mademoiselle," replied Vera coldly.

"We shall not live together any the less, and it will be as necessary for you to grow as accustomed to me as for me to grow accustomed to you."

Moisette as desperate. She made a great effort and turning toward Severac she said:

"Monsieur, for the first time, I am going to ask something of you."

"What is it, Moisette?" asked Severac constrainedly.

Severac and Vera

"I beg you to say to Mademoiselle Vera that my room is to be my own."

"That was understood in advance. You have your room, Vera has hers.

"You will only meet one another in the salon and in the dining room, but Vera will prepare your meals until I have found the servant I promised."

"Very well," said Moisette.

Drawing herself up in order to better appear indifferent, the poor captive bird left the salon.

Severac and his daughter stayed alone.

"Vera," said the man in a low voice, "don't forget my instructions. You are to pass for my neice. Force yourself to gain her confidence. As you appeared stern at first, she cannot fail to feel more drawn toward you when she believes that she has made you pity her, and that you are letting yourself be won more and more.

"You understand everything. She is our hostage. Through her we shall hold Hictaner, if I cannot get him otherwise.

"With her we can hold the whole world in our power even if I cannot deliver Hictaner to the infuriated nations. Do you understand?"

"I understand, father."

"Good. Now I am going to the Marseilles conference. I know how to get in. I will act as circumstances seem to dictate. Go to the launch—you have not forgotten the trick?"

"No."

"Good! We will leave the grotto and land near Llansa, where I will take the train for Marseilles. You can return here in the launch. Let us go."

A quarter of an hour later the swift craft sped over the surface of the water. It bore Vera and her father, Severac.

To Be Continued To-morrow

"Hictaner" is running serially in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN. A liberal instalment of this remarkable mystery novel will be printed in Sunday's AMERICAN.

The Three Wishes

By THOMAS TAPPER

IF you could have three wishes, what would they be?

The world is so full of things you want that three seems a small number. So you ask for health, wealth and happiness and let it go at that. Yet it never occurs to you that the second, wealth, is capable of destroying the other two, and you are soon as bad off as ever.

There are three wishes that will yield you everything. You may be disappointed to read their names. But, nevertheless, they are THE three things that put everything straight and make you master of the situation. Furthermore, they are not impossible. All you have to do is to wish for them and they are yours.

Well, what are they?

Just a moment.

Some time ago, the editor of this paper wrote an editorial about the house fly as a pest. With the article, there appeared an enlarged picture of a fly's foot—perhaps five hundred times as large as the average fly itself. As I read this editorial, a fly lit on the paper and began to crawl over the picture of its own foot. Did it realize that it was walking on a picture of a part of its own anatomy?

The fact is that the paper, the picture, the editorial, the brain that conceived the editorial, the machinery that put the paper into your hands—all employed to speak the truth about a fly's foot—represent a form of life so far above the fly itself that even when the fly crawled over the picture it did not know of them.

We are probably crawling over the earth in more or less the same way. That is, like the fly, we conceive our own world but not the realm of lofty intelligence that surrounds us and comprehends us as we comprehend the fly.

Hence, Wish Number One:

MAY I BE FOREVER CONSCIOUS OF THE GREAT OCEAN OF UNIVERSAL LIFE THAT GIVES ME MY BEING.

Let the mystery of life be what it may, you can make no mistake in seeking the strength and the quickening power of the Universal Life of which you are a part.

You are trying to understand the world in which you live. To do this, you use the mind. With little and improper use you understand little and misunderstand much. With proper and extreme use of the mind, you understand more and more.

All negations come from misunderstanding and misreading the world. They are Disapopintment, Worry, Idleness, Fear, Anxiety, Poverty and Company.

And, for the most part, they are all the result of misunderstanding the world in its relation to the Universal Life in which you live.

Hence, Wish Number Two:

MAY I BECOME CAPABLE OF USING AND DEVELOPING MY MIND SO THAT I READ THE WORLD ABOUT ME, SIMPLY AND DIRECTLY, AS I READ THE WORDS ON THIS PAGE.

You live in the world to work and to express yourself. The tools you work with are mind and body. When the mind is in tune with the Universal Life you will begin to understand what the purpose of the body is.

Hence, Wish Number Three:

MAY I TRAIN MY BODY TO BE THE OBEDIENT SERVANT OF MY MIND, JUST AS I AM TRAINING MY MIND TO BE CONSCIOUS OF THE UNIVERSAL LIFE ABOUT ME.

There is one particular thing about these three wishes. They will not be handed down to you on a gold plate. If you want them YOU MUST GET THEM YOURSELF.

And once you have them you need not wish for anything else.

It looks mighty bad for the villain at last. If the Turks do not surrender, Desmond will be executed by being blown from the mouth of a cannon. And yet the crafty scoundrel does not appear to be greatly alarmed. Is it possible that he can have something up his sleeve? Even the sight of the Turkish commandant rowing off to surrender his sword to the Italian admiral should not be enough to make the scoundrel so mirthful. There is something sinister about such laughter.

The Turk, who has come off flying a white flag, surrenders his sword But the vile Oriental has no regard for the usages of civilized warfare—if there can be "civilized" warfare. The sword is connected with an electric battery: the admiral can't let go and is towed away. Claude and the sailors leap over to rescue him; Desmond is freed by a Turkish spy concealed in the cannon and he takes charge of the ship, with Rosamond in his power. He will head for Constantinople (see map below), but the Italian ships may get him to-morrow.

PART TWO

THEN she had seemed to him beautiful as the mother of fair love; now her face was scarred by grief, like the face of the mother of sorrows. And in Clemency Westgarth's face the man seemed to see written large one of the effects of his sin.

The muscles of his mouth contracted with a mechanical spasm of unconscious grief.

With a mental detachment curious at the moment he asked himself questions. Had he obeyed the call of her woman's nature—obeyed what Conrad Tring had told him was the call of duty and stayed that night; had he married Clemency Westgarth and gone on in the old, beautiful, easy routine of cathedral life—would he have been a better man? And the answer came to him with emphatic decision—no. The potentialities that had burst into being in "John Saxe" would have been there all the time, waiting only the opportunity of temptation. He would in all things have been the same man, lacking only the bitter self-knowledge that now had scourged him in true humility, a penitent to the feet of God.

As he held her the sudden dragging weight of the body in his arms told him beyond doubt that the girl had fainted or relapsed into unconsciousness. He laid her down gently, unresisting now, and searched in the load in the hope of finding a little brandy. There was some spirit in a flask, and he forced a little between her clenched teeth. The operation was difficult, and most of the liquid spilled, yet the few drops she swallowed took effect almost magically. A faint color stole into her cheeks, her eyes opened and she smiled at him.

"Don't go back to your grave yet, Jack," she whispered. "Wait for me. I am coming, too . . . . ."

Hand Held His

Her hand went out gropingly toward his, caught it, and held it fast. He could not have shaken off the grip if he would. But he made no attempt to do so. He sat down on the tree root beside her and waited for the next move in this grim jest that fate sprung upon him.

Her last words would have told him, even without the rapid beat of the pulse and the quick, short pant of the breath, that the girl was in the grip of the malignant fever that lies in wait for the European in this fever belt. Her mind was clouded, to her he was no more than the figure that came and went in her dreams.

But as he sat staring into the fire, a prey to the most profound despondency that had yet gripped him, even in this land that was the veritable slough of despond, he told himself that when next the girl started awake it would probably be in one of the lucid intervals that recurred in the fitful, checkered pattern into which the fever wove itself.

When next Clemency awoke she would demand an explanation from him. And what explanation had he to offer?

A day or two ago—before the new birth that had come on him in the wooded amphitheatre near the village of Nokyoro—he would have seen but one inevitable way out. It did not so much as occur to the man sitting here. He must wait until the fever declared itself definitely, or the girl could give some explanation of her presence there, and then he must do what lay within his power to bring her into safe haven again.

HIS OVERDUE DEBT

SO much at least he owed her. So much he could pay. But the cost to him of his overdue debt? His lips tightened and his eyes darkened. It was a grim reckoning that grew into being, written in the heart of the fire.

With a deep breath, Martindale stood up, stretched himself, stiff and pained from his cramped position. He was amazed, glancing at his watch, to find how long he had been crouching there—that mental reckoning had occupied a long, long time.

He had his pipe with him and tobacco, and he took it out and filled it, ramming down the shreds into the brown bowl with a sigh of contentment. Shifting where the fumes would be carried away from the girl into the forest, he bent forward to take up a spark from the fire to light it.

He drew back, hearing, as Clemency had heard, the far-off crashing and rending of the undergrowth that told of life and movement near at hand.

"It's a human being of some color," he muttered to himself, and waited, his hand on something that lay bulging the pocket of his coat. His lips were parted breathlessly, and the light in the eyes that were strained into the darkness of the forest aisles was such a light as the girl lying behind him had never seen in the quiet blue eyes of the man who had won her love in the sleepy English cathedral town.

There was the sound of footsteps, distinct and unmistakable. The green curtain of the ti-ti plants parted, more easily than they had parted for him not so long before, and a man stepped forward into the circle of the firelight.

As Clemency had stared at him, so he stared at this apparition in the ragged clothes, the scarcely human-looking man, with the grizzled beard and dirt-caked face, out of which looked bright, aggressive, northern eyes. He did not know Andrew Grieve; he had not seen any of Clemency's party, and it was not for a full moment that the remembrance flashed into his mind that Laurence Baring had spoken of Miss Westgarth as having come up country under the escort of an elderly Scotsman.

Grieve Spoke First

It was Grieve who spoke first. His lips were parched and dry, his throat rasped and aching with thirst, and his voice seemed hardly human as it came across the fire.

"Wha the deil are ye?" he demanded, "and what's yer business here?"

The rough voice, full of distrust, seemed to give an adjusting touch to Martindale's self-control. His thoughts had not been wholly selfishly idle during his vigil beside Clemency. He had thought out more than one plan, though all plans seemed futile in the face of the great uncertainty in which he found himself. But now fate seemed to have placed a fighting change in his hands.

"My name is Saxe," he said. "John Saxe, of Nokyoro—and you, if I am not mistaken, are one of this lady's escort? I heard from my boys that a white man had traveled up with her. What on earth has happened to your party? You are hopelessly out of your course, you know. Where are your men?"

Grieve waxed inarticulate over the story of his wrongs.

It was with difficulty that Martindale could soothe the man; Grieve was unnerved, overwrought with hunger, fatigue and lack of sleep. For hours he had been beating the bush in search of the village where he had hoped so confidently to procure help and food; only, after he had endured the agony of knowing himself to be hopelessly lost and out of his bearings, having made a last desperate effort to go forward, to find that he had traversed a heart-breaking circle, and was back again at the point from which he had started, the poorer in strength, utterly bankrupt in hope.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

TWENTY YEARS OF TERRIBLE ITCHING

Untold Agony, Ashamed to Be Seen, Nothing Helped. Resinol Instantly Relieved

Such is the terrible story of a man in New Haven, Conn. He could not sleep at night; body, legs and arms were absolute torments. And then on the horizon of this man's agonized life rose a little 50-cent jar of Resinol, which immediately cast a radiance of soothing relief, such as nothing had been able to do for twenty or more years. He says:

"For twenty years or more I was troubled with terrible itching of the body, arms and legs. I suffered untold agony, could hardly sleep at night and was actually ashamed to be seen. I had been under the care of a dozen or more physicians, but none seemed to help me. I obtained a small jar of Resinol Ointment, applied same and was instantly relieved. I then purchased a cake of Resinol Soap and used it in connection with the ointment. The itching soon became less and in a short time entirely passed away.

"THOMAS G. HULL,
"New Haven, Conn."

Resinol Ointment is instant relief to eczema, scalds and burns, tetter, milk crust, ringworm, barber's itch, pimples, blackheads, chilblains, cracked lips, chapped face and hands, itching, boils or any skin eruption. Resinol Soap used with Resinol Ointment is doubly effective. Your druggist has Resinol Ointment in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes, and you can secure free sample for trial purposes by writing to Department 88, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DON'T HAVE TWO LOVES

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-two and have been engaged to a young man for the last eighteen months. Soon after our engagement he left New York. He wrote me a few letters the first few months. Now I don't hear from him. Kindly tell me what I should do. Another young man wants to keep company with me. Should I forget the other man?

M. K. P.

THE engagement to the first young man must be definitely broken before any other man can take his place. It is strange that you received no news from him. Write him and tell him you fear he has forgotten you, and as you have heard nothing from him, you suppose he may have become interested in some other person and you think it is best to break the engagement with him. Before any further steps are taken, you must hear his reply.

PRACTICE SELF-CONTROL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a man I have known five years. I am seventeen; he is a year my junior. I love him, and he has told me he loves me. I write to him every week and very seldom get an answer. Do you think he really cares for me? I go to see him quite often, and once visited a week at his home. He comes to see me only about once a month.

ANXIOUS.

YOU will only lose his friendship if you continue in this way. It is not your place to write or call, and in paying so much attention to him you are only lessening your hold on him. Both of you are rather young, and a sincere friendship would be better than this foolish, sentimental relationship. Above all, do not continue as formerly. Give him a chance to prove whether he really cares for you, and if you really wish him to like you avoid showing so plainly your own feelings.

WAIT FIVE YEARS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen and am in love with a girl three years my senior. She loves me, but thinks the difference in our ages is too great and she fears that we cannot live happily, as later in life we might not agree. We both love each other dearly.

K. D.

IT all depends upon your characters. Three years is not a great difference in age, and it would be quite possible for you to be most congenial.

But you are much too young to marry now, and even if you become engaged my advice is to wait at least five years before being married.

At present your character is forming; you are growing into manhood and can hardly tell what your feelings will be five years hence.

Neither the girl nor you will lose anything by waiting, and both of you will have a far better chance of being happy in the end.

DON'T BE RECKLESS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a man who poses for moving pictures. I have never met him, but can reach him through the mail. Would it be improper for me to start a correspondence with him? I love him dearly.

VIRGINIA.

YOUR suggestion is a dangerous one. To enter into a correspondence with some one utterly unknown to you would be folly. This man may not be a gentleman, and in placing yourself in such a false position he might take advantage of you. Even though you had met him you cannot be the first to write. The kind of love you speak of is not lasting, as it is based merely on personal appearance. True love must have a deeper foundation and I know you will realize this some day and be glad that you waited.

HOW I MADE MY HAIR GROW

Woman With Marvelously Beautiful Hair Gives Simple Home Prescription Which She Used With Most Remarkable Results.

I was greatly troubled with dandruff and falling hair. I tried many advertised hair preparations and various prescriptions, but they all signally failed; many of them made my hair greasy so it was impossible to comb it or do it up properly. I think that many of the things I tried were positively injurious, and from my own experience I cannot too strongly caution you against using preparations containing wood alcohol and other poisonous substances. I believe they injure the roots of the hair. After my long list of failures, I finally found a simple prescription which I can unhesitatingly state is beyond doubt the most wonderful thing for the hair I have ever seen. Many of my friends have also used it and obtained wonderful effects therefrom. It not only is a powerful stimulant to the growth of the hair and for restoring gray hair to its natural color, but it is equally good for removing dandruff, giving the hair life and brilliancy, etc., and for the purpose of keeping the scalp in first-class condition. It also makes the hair easier to comb and arrange in nice form. I have a friend who used it two months and during that time it has not only stopped the falling of his hair and wonderfully increased its growth, but it practically restored all of his hair to its natural color. You can obtain the ingredients for making this wonderful preparation from almost any druggist. The prescription is as follows:

Bay Rum, 6 oz.; Menthol Crystals, ½ drachm; Lavona de Composée, 2 oz. If you like it perfumed add a few drops of To-Kalon Perfume, which mixes perfectly with the other ingredients. This, however, is not necessary.

Apply night and morning; rub thoroughly into the scalp.

Go to your druggist and ask for an eight ounce bottle containing six ounces of Bay Rum; also one-half drachm of Menthol Crystals, and a two-ounce bottle of Lavona de Composée. Mix the ingredients yourself at your own home. Add the Menthol Crystals to the Bay Rum and then pour in the Lavona de Composée and add the To-Kalon Perfume. Let it stand one-half hour and it is ready for use.

Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores, the well known and reliable druggists of this city, have filled this formula for many of their patrons and state that the satisfaction from its use is so great that they have found it necessary to make special provision to fill the prescription promptly and carefully.

Up-to-Date Jokes

Paddy has a great power of enjoyment after all. One day as he was out walking he saw a bull attack a man, and he had to hold his sides with both hands the scene was so funny. After a time the animal turned his attention to him, and poor Pat, after exploring the upper regions, came down with a bump on the other side of the fence. He rubbed his wounds as he said to himself:

"Faith, I'm glad I had my laugh when I did or I wouldn't have had it at all."

An aristocratic visitor who was making the final call in the slum district, rising, said:

"Well, my good woman, I must go now. Is there anything I can do for you?"

"No, thank you, mum," replied the submerged one. "Ye mustn't mind if I don't return the call, will ye? I haven't any time to go slummin' myself."

* * *

"Do you know Garrulous?"

"Not to speak to."

"But I thought you had called on him."

"I did—but he did all the talking."

"A man tried to pick my pockets yesterday in the street, but my wife prevented him."

"Did she grapple with him, or just scream?"

"Neither. She wasn't there."

"She had been through my pockets first."

* * *

"Does your wife ask you for things she knows you cannot afford?"

"She hasn't asked me for a thing since we were married."

"Great heavens! How do you manage it?"

"When she wants a thing she does not ask me; she tells me."

* * *

Blink (the wholesaler)—Well, how many orders did you get yesterday?

Gink (the salesman)—I got two orders in one store.

Blink—What were they?

Gink—One was to get out, and the other was to stay out.

* * *

Disgusted Customer—I bought a currant bun here yesterday and found a fly in it. I want you to exchange the bun for another.

Confectioner—Can't do that, sir; but if you will bring me back the fly, I'll give you a currant for it.

The Sun thanks Anty Drudge.

Sun—"My, how I do like to shine and dry clothes washed with Fels-Naptha soap. Anty Drudge is my best friend. She never makes me re-bleach clothes yellowed by boiling."

Anty Drudge—"Thank you, Mr. Sun. But I deserve all the nice things you say. And let me add: If all folks would only adopt the sensible Fels-Naptha way of washing—and abolish boiling—how happy they would be."

In India the women soak dirty clothes in water, lay them on a flat stone and then beat them with another stone.

Hard on the clothes, certainly!

But isn't boiling and washboard rubbing nearly as hard on clothes?

To say nothing of its wear and tear on your health and strength—and good looks.

Fels-Naptha saves your strength; saves the clothes; saves time, labor, money, health.

Just soap the things with Fels-Naptha; roll and put in cool or lukewarm water for 30 minutes.

The Fels-Naptha loosens and dissolves the dirt. All you need do is rub lightly, rinse and hang out to dry.

Besides the ease of using Fels-Naptha, you'll find it makes the things whiter, sweeter, cleaner.

Be sure to use cool or lukewarm water—no boiling. Just follow simple directions on the red and green wrapper.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCK MARKET TONE IS STRONG

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Strength in Union Pacific and Reading, both of which advanced a point, marked the opening of the stock market to-day.

Subsequently selling developed which wiped out the gains. There was also good demand for Northern Pacific, which rose ⅛. Steel common opened at 62½, a gain of ⅝ over last night's close. Amalgamated Copper and American Smelters each gained ⅛. A strong tone was displayed at the opening, and the most of the important issues registered gains ranging from fractions to a point. Missouri Pacific and Pennsylvania were unchanged, but the following other gains were made: Erie common ⅛, Atchison ¼, Southern Pacific ⅝; Canadian Pacific was one of the weakest issues, declining ⅝.

The Curb opened quiet and unchanged. Americans in the London market showed a disposition to rally, but were under pressure from both English and American sources.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Heavy profit taking, along with the shrinkage of the short interest, has left the market in a technically weaker condition, and reaction is only natural after the recent rise of from 10 to 15 points.

$ $ $

It is the belief in State street that business has turned the corner and ought to show gains steadily. Trade depressions do not end without the application of a cure, but it may be relied upon that in prevailing circumstances the return of confidence will help the patient amazingly.

According to the reports now coming in, railroad earnings may be expected to improve, and the dividends of some of the weaker industrial companies may be regarded as safe. It may be said that substantial improvement in net earnings at this season would be almost without precedent, but such improvement would not be in the nature of a phenomenon.

The latest news from Washington indicates a determination on the part of the administration to go after the trusts that have been maintained from time immemorial by middlemen. There is an illegal pool, for instance, in thread that has been in continuous operation ever since before the Sherman Anti-Trust law was passed. Every department of trade and commerce has its peculiar trust of middlemen. The middlemen perform a useful service to the world, but their trade agreements are illegal under the Sherman law, and every one of the merchants engaged in this business is liable to criminal prosecution the same as the wire pool men who gave up a thousand dollars each a few months ago.

Reciprocity Will Bring a New Era of Trade Expansion

There is a way to set the wheels of industry going at full speed. There is a way to increase the prosperity of American farmers. There is a way to make the United States the centre of the circle of universal commerce.

RECIPROCITY IS THE WAY—reciprocity as a settled and general policy, a permanent part of a reasonable protective tariff system.

Now is the time to begin. Say, rather, now is the time to make a fresh beginning. THREE TIMES WITHIN THIRTY YEARS THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT HAS BEGUN TO DO THIS VERY THING. Three times it has deliberately set to work to weave this principle and practice of wide reciprocity into the texture of our tariff system.

Three times since 1880 the country has been led to the top of this Pisgah and has been permitted to look for a brief moment over into the promised land of Prosperity. Three times the vision has been withdrawn—after a tantalising proof of the reality of the happy prospect.

Timid and tentative have been the experiments. They have been thwarted again and again by party jealousy or private interests, or by both in co-operation.

But the proofs of the immense advantage of reciprocal tariff agreements with European countries and with our South American neighbors have been cumulative and undeniable. THE CASE FOR GENERAL RECIPROCITY IS PROVED BY ACTUAL EXPERIENCE.

We had reciprocity with Canada between 1854 and 1865. From the day it went into effect our exports to Canada rapidly increased, until the Civil War broke, with its incalculable waste and consumption of goods. Reciprocity had been an unqualified success, but the treaty was abrogated by us, not for commercial reasons, but in resentment for the part which Canadian sympathy was supposed to have taken in the Civil War. We closed the door against Canada in 1861, and Canada refused to reopen it in 1911. So that avenue is closed for the moment.

But the case for general reciprocity should now be considered quite apart from the recent Canadian experience. There are other countries with which our trade is much more important. IT WAS NOT UNTIL 1880 THAT THE IDEA OF RECIPROCITY AS A WIDE EMBRACING TARIFF POLICY DAWNED UPON AMERICAN PUBLIC MEN.

In that year President Arthur sent a trade commission to South and Central America to plan an American Zollverein or "Customs Union." The results were mainly educational, save that the Hawaiian Reciprocity Treaty was negotiated, with results that became important and historic in annexation twelve years later.

The SECOND NATIONAL impulse toward general reciprocity began in 1889. The momentous Pan-American Congress was then convened at Washington. To the representatives of All-America, as well as to our own Congress, James G. Blaine, Secretary of State, submitted his plan for an American Customs Union. The result was a clause in the McKinley tariff bill, then pending, providing that "the President be authorized without further legislation to declare the ports of the United States free and open to all the products of any nation of the American hemisphere—whenever or so long as such nation shall admit" the flour, cornmeal, breadstuffs, etc., of the United States free of all taxes.

The House of Representatives seized this opportunity to open the markets of forty million people to the products of American farmers. But Blaine's programme was killed by Senator Aldrich.

Said Gibson of Louisiana: "The statesmanlike and magnificent suggestion of the Secretary of State perished, even before it had received consideration. It went down before the shepherd's crook, stricken to death at the hands of Senators who stood for wool."

Nevertheless, a debilitated form of the Blaine proposal DID get into the McKinley tariff bill of 1890. It WAS great in its consequences, though wrought in a grudging spirit. FOR IT ESTABLISHED THE PRINCIPLE THAT WIDESPREADING RECIPROCITY IS DESTINED TO BE A PERMANENT PART OF THE AMERICAN PROTECTIVE SYSTEM.

Under the "reciprocity section" of the McKinley tariff of 1890 the President was authorized to withhold free entry of certain free-listed goods—raw sugar, molasses, coffee, tea and hides—from any nation that should refuse to grant us a quid pro quo.

Under this niggardly provision a dozen trade agreements were entered into. All these agreements with foreign countries were greatly to our advantage. Germany abolished its long-standing prohibition against American hogs, and gave us the full benefit of its "conventional" tariff ON ALL AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS. Austria-Hungary gave us the rates of "the most favored nation" on 2,000 separate items of American export.

But all these reciprocity arrangements under Section 3 of the McKinley bill were brought summarily to an end on August 27, 1894, by the passage of the Wilson tariff bill, WHICH ANNULLED THAT SECTION.

Meanwhile this second national effort at general reciprocity had abundantly justified itself. It fell in an era of unprecendented commercial depression. It lightened that depression by a marked stimulation of foreign trade. Thus, for example, our annual exports to Germany just before the beginning of this experiment amounted to ninety millions. In the midst of the four-year period of reciprocity they rose to one hundred and three millions; and immediately after the cancelling of the reciprocity agreement they fell to eighty-eight millions.

Our THIRD national movement toward general reciprocity began in 1897. The Dingley tariff bill empowered the President, WITH THE CONSENT OF THE SENATE, to make a reciprocity treaty with any country. He was authorized to offer three inducements: (1) Reduction of the duty upon any article in the whole tariff list, to the extent of not more than 20%. (2) Transfer to the free list of any article that was a natural product of the foreign country, but not of ours. (3) Guaranty that any article on the free list should be kept there. Secretary Hay negotiated and signed eleven advantageous treaties with foreign nations under this section 4 of the Dingley act. THEY WERE ALL PIGEONHOLED AND KILLED IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE BY THE SAME SENATORIAL POWERS OF PRIVILEGE THAT CUT THE HEART OUT OF THE BLAINE RECIPROCITY PLAN.

But the Dingley bill contained another reciprocity section—Section 3. Under this section certain limited reciprocity agreements could be entered into, WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF THE SENATE.

Nine trade agreements have been made under Section 3, and seven of them are still in operation. Secretary Hay made extraordinary bargains with France, Germany, Italy and Portugal.

Germany, for instance, conceded TO ALL IMPORTS FROM THE UNITED STATES THE FULL AND UNQUALIFIED BENEFIT OF HER "CONVENTIONAL" TARIFF—a specially low tariff created by Germany for her European neighbors.

Without injury to a single American industry, without eliciting a single murmur of complaint in this country, Secretary Hay secured from Germany a guaranty against discrimination in any article of our export trade. This agreement, so cheaply purchased, was of marked political advantage also. It established more amicable relations than had ever before existed between the German and American peoples.

The immediate effect was a decided increase in our exports to Germany from $155,800,000 in 1899 to $191,800,000 in 1901, to $249,555,926 in 1910. Our imports from that country in 1910 were $168,805,137.

THIS RECIPROCITY AGREEMENT WITH GERMANY WAS TERMINATED ON THE 7TH OF FEBRUARY LAST YEAR. AND THE WHOLE QUESTION OF OUR FUTURE TRADE RELATIONS WITH THAT GREAT COUNTRY NOW LIES OPEN.

The AMERICAN submits to the people of the United States—and it will urge upon the coming session of Congress—that LIBERAL TREATIES OF RECIPROCITY SHOULD BE MADE THIS WINTER WITH AT LEAST TWO COUNTRIES—GERMANY AND THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

Beginning with these, the reciprocity policy should be extended as rapidly as possible to many other countries throughout the world. IT IS THUS THAT WE SHOULD USHER IN THE ERA OF THE PANAMA CANAL, THE ERA OF A REVIVED MERCHANT MARINE, THE ERA OF A NEW AMERICA, FULLY AWAKENED TO ITS WORLD-MISSION AND FIT FOR ITS PREDESTINED PLACE AT THE FOCUS OF THE LONG TRAILS AND THE SEVEN SEAS.

The German nation is modern, progressive, democratic. It is bound to us by ties of blood and history, ties of interest and sentiment as intimate as those that link us with English speaking lands. Argentina is a New Western America, lying under the Southern Cross. It has a giant city like Chicago. It has vast prairies full of cattle and sheep—prairies that are like our own vanished ranges. It offers us an indefinite extension of our own national youth—a renewal of the life of the frontier.

Germany is old. Its lands are inadequate fully to clothe and feed its crowding millions. It needs our corn and cotton. Argentina is new and pastoral. It contains all crude, pristine and elemental things. Between these two stands the United States, balanced and mediatory, with its immense mills and cultivated fields. It is neither young nor old. But its mills are slowed, for the lack of markets, and its fields are half cultivated, for the same cause. It needs the ripe old world of Europe and the raw young world of South America to quicken the discovery of its own latent but incomparable strength.

For use in manufactures we have a greater supply of iron and cotton and coal and copper than any other nation.

We have the best machinery and the most skillful workmen. We have the most perfect railway system on the planet, to transport our products to the water's edge, and an open ocean, on either side of us, to float them to the markets of the world.

WHAT WE NEED IS WIDE RECIPROCITY—AND SHIPS.

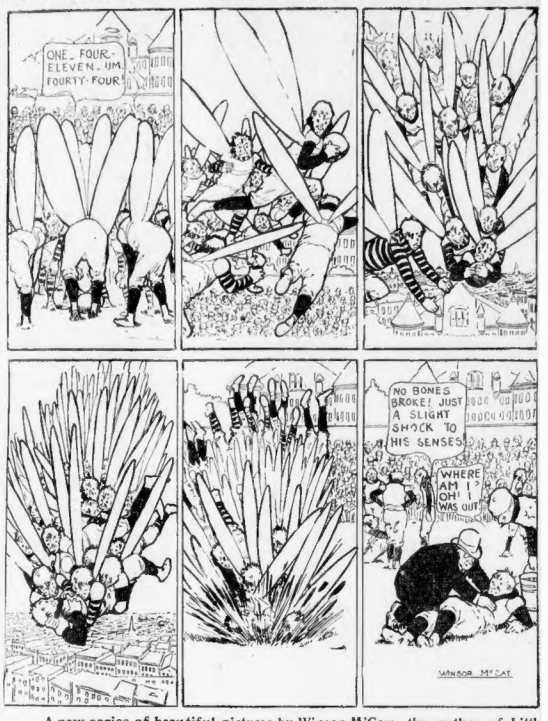

For these things the AMERICAN will continue to plead and argue and show cause and offer proofs.

WAKE UP, AMERICANS! AND AWAKEN CONGRESS.

WITH RECIPROCITY AND A MERCHANT MARINE WE SHALL HAVE PROSPERITY AT HOME AND THE INDISPUTABLE COMMAND OF THE SEAS.
